Of all the charms dear woman wears, Of all her many traps and eners, For real effect there's raught compares With a truly pretty bonnet;
For when or wherever you chance to meet
One that is perfectly medest and neat,
You may depend 'tis a proof complete
That the head has more in than on it.

No matter whether she's pretty or a How much or how little money she Whether she live in mansion or cot, 'Tie a fact, depend upon it; The woman to make a man happy the To make a medal methet and wife, Is one who, scorning this milliner a Wears a plain and tasteful bonn

Now a bonnet of genuine beauty Worn on the head in its proper Shadowing faintly the wearst "Is a thing for a song or a But one of these gay and gat Made up of rainbows and but A mixture of flowers, ribbons. Is dreadful, depend upon it.

A vulgar mass of "fuse and feather A little of everything thrown togeth A wretched conglomeration— A sort of a cup to catch the bair, Leaving the head to "go it bare,"
A striking example of "Nothing to wear,"

Is this bonnet abomination.

It makes a woman look brazen and bold, Assists her in catching nothing but cold, Is bad on the young, absurd on the old, And deforms what it ought to deck; For look at her face, no bonnet is there, See at the side it hangs by a hair : View it behind, and you will declare
That the creature has broken her neck.

No matter where you may chance to be, No matter how many women you see, A promiscuous crowd or a certain she, You may depend upon it That a gem of the very rarest kind, A thing most difficult to find, A pet for which we long have pined, is a perfect "love of a bonnet."

Congressions,
The bill for the admission of Oregon was send in the Sanate on the 18th May, by a vote of 36 to 17, and the universal opinion was that it would pass the House before the adjournment. The Washington correspon dent of the San Francisco Bulletin says :-"It [the Oregon bill] was first considered in the Senate, in Committee of the Whole, on the 5th, and a lengthened discussion ensued. Mr. Mason, of Virginia, professed to know very little about the distant Territory, and at, he said, whether sessed sufficient population, or could afford to pay the charges of a State government. Mr. Douglas replied that, to judge by the votes given on the State Constitution, there should be some seventy or eighty thousand inhabitants there. Mr. Douglas did not doubt that Oregon had a population of ten or twenty thousand more than Kansas had, and he thought that, under the circumstances, it would not be becoming in Congressio reject her application for admission. Mr. Benjamin, of Louisiana, was in favor of admitting Oregon, but, in future, he would insist that a census be taken before a new State is admitted. Several Senators-and particularly those of Abolition tendenciesexpressed themselves in opposition of Oregon. Mr. Fessenden, of Maine, objected because negroes, which in Maine are citizens equal with the whites, were not allowed by the Constitution of Oregon to enter the State. Mr. Trumbull, of Illinois, did not coincide in the views of the Senator from Maine, but still was not prepared at present to vote for the admission, and moved that the subject be postponed until December .-Mr. Wilson thought that the provisions in the Oregon Constitution regarding negroes, and the one prohibiting Chinamen from holding any real estate or mining claim, were unconstitutional, inhuman, and unchristian." Mr. Hale was quite violent in his opposition, and a d he would not vote for the admission of Oregon, with such a Constitution on this side of eternity. By his past services to, and experience with, the Mormons, he had won the confidence of their leaders, while his knowledge of the purposes and preparations of the Government enabled him to convince those leaders that resistance on their part was hopeless. We wish he had gone to Utah some months earlier : but his bold and self-sacrificing mission has doubtless been undertaken in season to save willions to the Treasury and avert from our nation the stain of a fruitless slaughter of thousands and the devastation of their homes. A violent tornado blew the passenger train of the Alton and St. Louis Railroad off the track at Lexington, Mo., on the night of the 13th ult., and several persons were seriously injured. The towns of Lexington and Peorl also suffered severely, balf of the houses in them being prostrated. At Towanda three men were killed. Yesterday another storm of like character passed over the region between Bloomington and Springfield, doing much damage. A large number of houses in Elkhart and Williamsville were demolished, one of them falling in and killing five persons.

Five Santa Fe merchants had arrived at St. Louis with $200,000 to buy goods with. In coming in they suffered terribly from storms and cold weather. Every train lost a greater or less number of horses and mules. One train belonging to Colonel St. Vrain lost in one night thirty animals from exposure to the cold weather. All the rivers were high, and water covered the plains. The Indians met by them reported the loss of nearly all their animals from the extreme cold weather. The grass was good on the
