My Pastor dear, as words are oft An idle, foolish waste, I send you something tangible, To better suit your taste. For since poor Adam lost a rib To win his lovely Eve, A mare rib all his worthy sous Are willing to receive; So please accept this little giff, I thus so humbly send; And the' it cometh from a hog, Believe me still your friend.

THE ACKNOWLEDGEMENT. I cannot hope, my worthy friend, In words of equal rhymo, To thank you for your welcome gift That comes in such good time, For my dear Rib, who comes in line From that our Adam lost, Avers that spare-robs in their place Are better than the first. And soon my family of eight Will sit in dinner rig. And bless the kind and generous heart That shares with us his pig.

A FLYING CONGRESS .- The flight of the rebel Congress from Richmond seems to have roused the anger of some of the journalists of that town, who would probably like to accompany the retreating orators, but that the "necessities of a daily paper" prevent. The Richmond Whig grows facecious over the

To protect the stampeders from the snakes and bullfrogs that abound along the line of the canal General Winder has detailed a regiment of ladies to march in advance and clear the towpath of the pirates. The regiment is armed with popguns of the longest range. The ladies will accompany the stampeders to a secluded cave in the mountains of Hepsidam, and leave them there in charge of the children of the vicinage, until McClellan thinks proper to let them come forth. The ladies return to the defense of their country."

The Examiner takes the matter more seriously, and calls the flight "an odious example to all classes." " It is done by the votes of the Senators of

This is all very well, but we cannot agree with the Examiner in what follows:

"They exhibit in this way of thinking a very narrow vision, a most imperfect idea of ror as to the future that lies close before them." We think, on the contrary, that they show a very clear apprehension of " what is passing here," and they are perfectly right in endeavoring to use "the fature that lies before them' in packing up their valuables, and getting ready for a further flight to a place of safetyor a leap into the last ditch. CRITTENDES'S " COMPROMISE."-In a recent speech in the House, Mr. Crittenden paid this handsome compliment to the President:

" I voted against Mr. Lincoln and opposed him honestly and sincerely; but Mr. Lincoln known has won me to his side. There is a niche in the temple of fame, a inche near to Washington, which should be occupied by him who shall save his country. Mr. Lincoln has a mighty destiny. It it for him, if he will, to step into that niche. It is for him to be but a President of the people of the United States. and there will his statue be. It is in his power to occupy a place next to Washington the founder and preserver, side by side."

VERY FRESCRY.-The newest invention for the depletion of the pockets of " Pater Familias" is the boquet parasol. It is a duck of a thing; but we can't describe it. When in its normal condition it is nothing but a pretty boquet; but as you press a spring, which combines with a whole machine shop full of hair triggers, it becomes a very elegant and serviceable sanshade. Of course no lady can do without one.

'Ed,' said a customer who had just purchased a battle of old Bourbon from the jocose apothecary who keeps on Post-office corner, "can you tell me why whisky always tastes smoky?" "It is because it always comes in pipes," replied the compounder of piles.

While in this State, and having previous to my affliction tasted the sweets of life, I one more was induced to attempt seeking aid of a physician, and, by recommendation, called at Dr. L. J. Czapkay. I told him my circumstaness and my inability to reward him for his services regardless of which, however, he at once under took my case, and, with the blessing of God, was once more restored to perfect health. Un able to reward him for the boon which I enjoy at present, and yet conscious of my indebted ness, I consider it due to myself and to all afflicted to make the case public, in order that these in need of medical advice may find a physician in whom every confidence can be placed.
