

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION IN ENGLAND.—The President's Emancipation Proclamation was published entire in all the London papers of October 6th, and the editorial comments appeared in the issues of the 7th. The secessionist journals are evidently alarmed at the prospect of its effect upon the slaves, but the journals which are friendly to us greet the measure with expressions of the highest approval. The London Morning Star says:

The inevitable day has come at last. There is an end of impossible attempts to restore an organized compromise. Republican institutions and resources are no longer to be employed in the protection of the slave system that has made war upon them. Negro emancipation is formally and definitely adopted as the policy, in war and peace, of the United States. * * * It is indisputably the great fact of the war—the turning point in the history of the American commonwealth—an act only second in courage and in probable results to the Declaration of Independence. That it has been so long postponed indicates its immense gravity. That it follows on a great military success, not on a defeat, indicates the spirit in which it is adopted. But a few days earlier, it would have been universally regarded as a confession of despairing consciousness that the forces of the North were unable to grapple even on Northern soil with those of the South. It comes now as a defiance to the power that is still strong enough to maintain its frontier, though compelled to relinquish its aggressive designs. And its promulgation will no doubt arrest the proposed dispatch of Commissioners from Richmond to Washington, to negotiate the terms of a "just and honorable peace." The Federal Government has anticipated the Confederate Congress in such proposals. The only peace the rulers of the Union desire is one compatible with "the restoration of constitutional relations" and the abolition of compulsory servitude—peace with justice for its basis, freedom for its object, Federal laws and the universal sympathy of mankind for its protection. * * * The slaves need wait no longer for the signal that their concealed and wary leaders have prudently withheld. In every canebrake and rice swamp—among the bales of boarded cotton and the trees of the pine forests—the negro may hold his council of war and resolve to strike for freedom. He may safely and wisely forego his vengeance for past wrongs. His cause is at length the cause of a mighty and resolute people. The fiat has gone forth, and the heart of humanity will hail its execution. On New Year's Day, 1863, slavery will cease to defile the American flag, and begin to disappear from the American soil.

A TOUCHING SCENE.—A touching scene is related as transpiring in a Philadelphia hospital, recently: Some benevolent ladies had distributed ice cream to the invalid soldiers and all gladly partook of the refreshment save one young, pale handsome boy. His eyes were closed, and one of the ladies observing him, softly whispered, "the poor fellow is asleep, we must not disturb him." "No, ma'am, I am not asleep," he answered, in a silvery voice, full of the sweetness of innocence and boyhood. "Well, my little fellow," continued the lady as she drew nearer, "are you fond of ice cream?" "Very much so," he replied. "Didn't you see me place this on your table?" reaching for the plate of cream. "Oh, yes," he answered, tremulously. "But I shut my eyes and cried to myself." "Cried, my child? why, what made you cry, my dear?" "Oh, madame, if you will pull the quilt down a little you will see. The lady did so, and found that he had no arms. Both of them had been lost in battle.

A CURIOUS CRITICISM ON McCLELLAN.—The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican says: "I know no better patriot or truer gentleman, than George B. McClellan. But there are acts of his which I cannot understand except upon the supposition of an inherent vice of mind, often the accompaniment of great organizing power, which makes him never ready to act. The whole power and energy of his nature seems to be devoted to making armies, not using them. He has too clear and distinct ideas of the wants of its deficiencies. He works and toils unceasingly to bring the army to a pitch of perfection which can never be reached, and in the meanwhile, a ragged half-starved, miserable mob of disorderly wretches, who know how to move, and having nothing but their legs, move fast, outmarches and out-generals him."

How LONG A BARK IT.—A private circular, says the Bee, has been issued by the rebel government to proprietors of newspapers forbidding the publication of President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. It is a mere brutum fulmen, is it? Why then do the head rebels fear not only to let the slaves hear of it, but also endeavor to keep it from the body of the people of the rebel States?

AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL CANDIDATE.—A man running for the Legislature in Illinois, says that he is for carrying on the war under the Constitution, over the Constitution, through the Constitution, around the Constitution, or against the Constitution. Any way whatever, so as to put down the rebellion.

The attention of the liberal thinking and reading of every community is called to this fact.
