To the Traveling Public.

THE undersigned has established a

FERRY

Across the North Umpqua River, about one mile below the old Winchester Ferry. The boat is large and safe, and is in good running order. This ferry is located on the west road, leading from Roseburg to Wilbur. The main object of this road is to shun the black mud on the old road, so much dreaded during the rainy season, and which is impassible during several months in the year. This is warranted to be a good and practical road, or no ferrage will be charged. The route being new, the grass is good for loose stock and pack animals.

HEIMSTREET'S Inimitable Hair Restorative.

IT IS NOT A DYE.

But restores gray hair to its original color, by supplying the capillary tubes with natural sustenance, impaired by age or disease. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, destroying the vitality and beauty of the hair, and afford of themselves no dressing. Heimstreet's inimitable coloring not only restores hair to its natural color by an easy process, but gives the hair a promotes its growth, prevents its falling off, eradicates the dandruff, and imparts health and pleasantness to the head. It has stood the test of time, being the original hair-coloring, and is constantly increasing in favor. Used by both gentlemen and ladies. It is sold by all respectable dealers, or can be procured by them of D. S. BARNES, Proprietor, New York.

Luxuriant Beauty,

JOB PRINTING neatly executed at the SENTINEL OFFICE.

From Hibernia.

APPELATE, March 9, 1863.

Mr. Editor:—There are in Oregon a portion of our fellow-citizens who have been, and remain, just as much a part and parcel of the great rebellion as if they were ranged under Lee in Virginia, or Magruder in Texas. The fortunate arrival of General Sumner to assume command on this coast, baulked the consummation of the overt act; and the result of the California election the following September showed the leaders the minority they were in. Nevertheless, the Government of the United States must be placed between two fires, one in the front in Virginia, the other in the rear in Oregon. And to carry it out with us the Chinese mode of tactics is adopted: beating great brass gongs and throwing stink-pots, and at every foul stench arising from the putrid carcass of the secession press, at every poisoned paragraph dropping from the pens of its traitorous editors, the immaculate Democracy rush to partake of the nauseous feast, as I have seen the turkey-buzzards in the market place of the city of Charleston, S. C., with their red heads outstretched and wings flopping, run forward to catch the tainted and fly-blown pieces of meat the butchers threw out of their stalls.

Shades of Old Tammany! Ghost of Faneuil Hall! what think you of the descendants who bear your time-honored names? What think you of the doctrines they now hold and those they taught me twenty-five years ago? Was it not delightful to the young Irishman, did it not sink deep into his ardent mind? that here, in the land of Washington, a great political party bore on its banners these fundamental truths: First, "that the majority shall govern;" and, second, "that governments were instituted for the greatest good of the greatest number." Did he not know that if the English Government had applied these sublime principles to the Irish people, that it would have inaugurated peace, happiness and prosperity? and thus it was that he remained true to the Democratic party until that party proved untrue to the political faith they had taught him. And now, ye venerable spirits, behold what the party proclaim who bear your once honored name. With arms in their hands, and their bayonets crimsoned with the blood of loyal citizens, they inscribe on their banners the words, "the minority shall govern;" and by a written constitution declare to an astonished and indignant world "that government is instituted for the perpetuation and extension of human slavery." They erect an idol whose pedestal is formed of ebony in the shape of a negro slave, capped by a block of marble representing a bale of cotton, surmounted by a statue of Jeff. Davis, holding in one hand the raw-head, in the other the bloody bones of an Abolitionist, killed at the battle of Bull Run, and the democratic party call on the freemen of the United States to fall down and worship this Moloch.

Never, since the morning stars first hymned their song of praise to the Creator, never, since the golden Orient first shed its bright beams o'er our mountain tops, and chased away the long night of darkness, has man committed so great a crime against humanity as that attempted to be perpetrated by the Democratic party. Were it to become successful, it would forever merge the right of the people to self-government. It would extinguish the last hope of down-trodden and suffering Ireland, which, in the course of time, would arise and, under the friendly shadow of our flag, secure her national independence. Oh, freemen of the United States! rouse up from your apathy in the hour of your country's danger. Oh! naturalized foreigners, who have been taken by the hand, by a magnanimous people, and led into the flowery walks of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and in the exuberance of your joy have exclaimed, I, too, am an American citizen, gird on the sword of the warrior, hold forth the gauntlet hand of the soldier to the enemies of Republican liberty, strike for home and America, and tho' victory may not always perch on your banner, yet remember "That Freedom's battle once begun, Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son, Tho' balked oft, is ever won."

Wagon Road.

PHOENIX, Ogn., March 13, 1863.

Ed. Sentinel:—Being one of the many interested, who attended the meeting of the Wagon Road Association, held at this place last Saturday, and believing, from a common-sense view of the facts, that this enterprise is the only present salvation to our agriculturists, it was a matter of serious disappointment to me to find so few of those whose interest is to be directly affected by the opening of this road present on that occasion. Where are our farmers, and what are they doing, that more of them, and in fact all of them, do not come forward like the men of all other sections of this great country, who are bestirring themselves to open up every available avenue to the markets that present themselves to their searching industry and enterprise, while we, in this valley, stand by with folded arms, our granaries and storehouses filled to overflowing with produce that will not command any price whatever? Why? Because the bulk of it is a surplus. And, in fact, if not an acre of grain is cut this coming season, we will still have abundance for our present markets until September 1864. Our present mining population, to a great extent, propose leaving us for the new diggings. With all these facts staring us in the face, we find that not one in twenty of our principal farmers, who are crying out from day to day, "We cannot sell our produce for anything, and there is no market for our surplus," will not even condescend to meet together for the purpose of trying to find relief for the evil complained of. What relief from his sufferings can a patient expect without seeking and applying a remedy? None, certainly. What relief can the farmers expect from this plethora of produce, unless they seek and find a market? none, certainly. It was generally believed and hoped that every farmer in this valley would be ready to fit up a team to go to the northern mines this spring, with every prospect of the investment being a good one, besides relieving our markets to a great extent, and inducing the emigration that passes here to follow, which would make a market for a large amount of produce, as they would necessarily purchase their outfit here. As the distance by this route is the shortest to any supplying point, trains and teams would immediately come to this point for supplies, from those mines, as soon as teams would go from here to convince them of our advantage over every other market. Without a doubt, before the next winter sets in, our markets will be cleaned of everything that we can spare. Hoping that those interested in this matter will consider it well, and be on hand at the next meeting, I will close.

Yours, etc. PHOENIX.

THE REMOVAL OF GENERAL PORTER.

We publish a copious digest in our present issue of Judge-Advocate-General Holt's summary of the evidence against Fitz John Porter, and a more damning narrative has seldom been recorded against an officer. Owing to his animosity to General Pope, he deliberately disobeyed an order to march against the enemy at the second battle of Bull Run, and remained with his army for seven hours while the battle was raging in the immediate vicinity, and never entered the field. If he had done his duty as directed, there is ever reason to believe that the Rebel Army would not only have been beaten, but destroyed, for he would have attacked them on the flank; and it will be remembered that on that day—the first day of the fight—the Rebels were repulsed and driven, but received reinforcements, and regained their lost ground on the following day. If the testimony is anything like a fair statement of the facts, he ought to have been blown from the muzzle of a rifle cannon.—N. Y. Mercury.

HERE is an interesting scrap from the prayer of a man who was in the habit of filling the breaks in his petitions with the syllable "er": "O Lord, we pray for our poor brother, who has lived for more than ten years on the Lord's side-er, and has one foot in the grave-er, and the other in the but-er."

QUESTIONS FOR QUACK DOCTORS.—Will eating roast duck give a man a fowl stomach? And if so, will the flesh of neat cattle be a good cleansing agent? Does eating green corn produce huskiness of voice? What hose should be used for corns, particularly where there are several acres under cultivation?
