

"TO THE EFFICACY AND PERMANENCY OF YOUR UNION, A GOVERNMENT FOR THE WHOLE IS INDISPENSABLE."—Washington.

JACKSONVILLE, OREGON.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, - MAY 20, 1863.

RELIGIOUS.—The Rev. P. M. Starr will preach at Vannoy's Ferry, on next Sabbath, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

Wm. J. BREGG Esq. Formerly of this place, has been admitted to the bar in Aurora (Nomo) county, Cal.

THE SANITARIAN.—What has become of the Sanitarian? 'Tis a pity that one so gifted should die so young.

OPPOSITION.—Read the advertisement of the people's opposition steam-ship line, between California and New York via Nicaragua, published to-day.

COAL.—A very extensive and valuable coal mine has been discovered by Mr. L. L. Richardson, about ten miles above the upper Cascades, on the Washington side of the Columbia river.

NOTICE.—The disciples of Belew are requested to meet at Clugage & Drum's Stable, on Saturday next, at 1 o'clock, P. M. The object is to learn a horse to climb a tree.—By order of Ex. Committee.

A CHANCE.—Let the men of honorable military ambition be encouraged by the remembrance of the fact that the late Major General Sumner rose from the ranks, having entered the army as a private in 1819. He died ripe in years, and his renown was great.

RESIGNATION.—Mr. James Kilgore, lately appointed by the Governor of this State as Colonel of the first regiment in the first brigade of militia of this State, we are informed will resign his position. We regret very much that his arrangements are such that he cannot accept. He is well qualified for the position, and would have made a very efficient officer.

ACCIDENT.—A gentleman by the name of Horton was seriously, if not mortally injured, on Monday last, a short distance from this town, by having a wagon, loaded with wood, fall upon him. He was driving on a sidling place, the ground was wet and slippery, the wagon veered and upset, and in the fall his hands got caught in the lines bringing him directly under the falling mass.

SPORTING ITEM.—Mr. A. J. Easton, owner of the celebrated Black Hawk stallion "David Hill," has a ranch near San Francisco, upon which he has made a race track which is attracting considerable attention from Turfmen. The track is upon marsh ground, drained by deep ditches, and the course proper, which is heavily covered with shells, is perfectly level, and is 44 feet wide. The track is very elastic, and can be used without any danger to the animals.

For the Judges stand, Mr. Easton has invented a revolving turret, by which the officers of the race can observe the course of the horses without for an instant changing position. Foul riding or any other misconduct on the part of the riders can thus be easily detected. Coupled with this, is the system of electric "starts" and "stops." The hoof of each horse, at the instant of crossing the score, strikes the electric platform under their feet, and record in the stand the relative positions by stopping watches connected with the electric wire worked by the platform. As they pass by the quarter poles a similar contrivance drops a flag at each quarter, so that the time for the quarters can be accurately marked at the turret, and at the outcome the same signal is given as at the start. If the legal profession go into the business generally, something of this kind will have to be adopted to secure fair play!

TO FOREIGNERS.—A bill has been introduced into the rebel Congress to withdraw all political privileges from foreigners, and from native born white Americans who were not in the Confederacy when the rebellion commenced. 1st, We remark that this bill slams the door directly in the face of the foreign emigrant, who, long oppressed at home, seeks political enfranchisement on American soil. He can enter the domains of the Southern Confederacy, but must ever exist there as a "mud-sill." What thinks German and Irish adopted citizens of this? Is it not Know Nothingism more damnable and prescriptive than was ever adopted before? Let the military despotism of Jeff Davis prove a success, and in every foot of territory where waves the Confederate flag, the foreigner, no matter what his intelligence, character or wealth may be, will be held and treated as an inferior, and not worthy the association of a Southern gentleman. Are our adopted citizens prepared for this?

2d, The sympathizers all over the North are told in terms as direct and positive as language can express it, that they can never have any political rights in the Southern Confederacy. Their labors in behalf of their southern masters are to avail them naught. They are not fit for the companionship of Southern gentlemen. They may fawn and apologize but can never be recognized as equals. Well might the Richmond Inquirer say, when it beheld the longings of these men to meet the Southrons once more in convention, "Assume any other shape but that." The gallant and brave can have no other feelings than that of supreme contempt for those who are neither friends nor foes, but are a sort of a bastard go-between. All remember the ridiculous position of Mr. Beeson in the Rogue River Indian wars. He was a go-between—abhorred by the whites and despised by the Indians. He said that the whites were as much if not more to blame than the Indians, and he would never volunteer, nor be drafted, to fight the poor Indians. This is the song of the sympathizers. O, say they, the North is as much to blame as the South, and I will not volunteer or be drafted to fight the dear South. It made no difference with Beeson that the Indians had commenced the war, and were spreading devastation far and near, nor does it make any difference with the sympathizers that the rebels fired upon Fort Sumpter, and trailed the American flag in the dust. How have the Beesons multiplied. No wonder that the rebels have passed a law forever disfranchising such characters within the limits of their domains.

LOST ILLUSIONS.—What a singular propensity men have of turning every thing inside out, of looking at the back as well as the front of a picture, of canting the statue from its pedestal to be satisfied that it is hollow and not solid. The savage who first beholds his image in the mirror immediately darts behind the glass; the child is dissatisfied with its accordeon till it has ripped open the valve to see where the wind and the music come from. Man, savage, and child mourn over their lost illusions, yet persist in the processes by which they are destroyed.

We are not contented to sit before the foot-lights and witness the pageant splendors that pass before our eyes; we must go behind the curtain, we must stand at the wings, we must gaze upon the black framework on which the canvass is stretched, we must discover that the soft, rolling waves in the port of Cyprus are nought but shaken carpets, that Cherry and Fair Star carry their own galley about the stage, and that Rosati instead of floating like a Summer cloud to the upper air, is pulled up into "flies" by a couple of stout mechanics working at a block and pulley. From that moment adieu to our pleasures. We are no longer in fairy land, when we are witnessing a fairy spectacle. Aladdin's palaces smells of the lamp—not the magic lamp—but that which is fed with whale oil or bas-baser lard. We no longer see before us airy slyphides—beings of another world—but Miss This or Miss That, people are no longer known by their theatrical names, but Smiths, and Joneses, and Browns. It is not the fairy Ardenelle who glides over the water in a car, drawn by swans, but Miss Jemima Muggins, and her car is dirty paste-board, and her swans are geese.

About four o'clock Thursday, morning, Edward Hill, alias Havis, made his escape from the guard, at Camp Baker. During the night he, managed to saw off his shackles, and under pretence of the necessity of being taken to the rear, was let out, and while passing from the guard house to the rear, he made a break. Four shots were fired at him by the guard, but unfortunately they all missed their mark. He had been arrested for murdering a soldier at the Dalles some, eighteen months ago.

BOISE MINES.—These mines are said to be paying from $15 to $100 per day, to the hand. Is it not always the case that mines a great way off invariably pay well?

To JAMES O'MEARA:—As you, by the publication of private letters, dishonorably if not feloniously obtained by you, seem to invite an investigation of personal matters, I propose to relieve the burden of your more serious mental labors by a few biographical sketches, the truthfulness and beauty of which you cannot fail to recognize. You once owned the SENTINEL Office, I believe. You sold the same for a valuable consideration to Messrs. Denlinger & Hand. You guaranteed, in your bill of sale, the correctness of your accounts as they stood upon the books. Is not this correct? Now, sir, as to the sequel. A large number of those whom the books showed to be debtors had receipts in their possession, which were subsequently presented by them, and allowed by the proprietors of this paper. Sir, there is a consistency, unity and harmony in your character that excites my admiration. You are the proper person to publish a stolen letter, stolen probably not by you, but by some one else, but a letter which you full well knew that you had no more right to the possession of, than the felon who first took it from the drawer of my office. It may be possible, sir, that you have the rest of the stolen property in your possession, and that we will ere long be astonished by some more private revelations. Let every man keep a lock upon his private correspondence, for the chivalry and their agents are abroad!
O. JACOBS.
