

THE OREGON SENTINEL

From Hibernia.

Oh! a farmer's life is the life for me,
With labor skilled, well paid, and free;
A luxuriant wife and comely daughters,
With sons to fight for freedom's altars.
And when at eve the chores are done—
The children circled round the bright hearstone,
We'll read the SENTINEL news, and scan
The battles for the rights of man.
And then the thought will come to mind
That printers are of human kind;
Need clothing, food, and fuel to store,
And eke subscribers in galore.

Ma. Edron.—In this climate, the sowing of grain commences when the old States are being ribbed with ice, and the winter and spring months here find the plough afield every fine day, constituting the Pacific Slope the paradise of farmers. It may not seem orthodox that a minor should concern himself with crops, but there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in our philosophy, and farmers are not the only portion of our population who possess a knowledge of the requirements and capabilities of Mother Earth. It is not my intention to write an essay on farming, but simply to point out to such of our farmers as desire to diversify their crops, an improved mode of raising early cabbage and tobacco plants, as well as cauliflower, tomato, etc., and how those in Rogue River valley who have no means of irrigation, and plenty of straw, can raise potatoes with very little labor without the possibility of a failure.

The tobacco crop will find a profitable market in the United States so long as foreign powers raise revenue from its import, and by law prevent their own people from cultivating it, and although the lover of a good cigar is likened to "fire at one end and a fool at the other," still the home consumption is not to be despised, and if the money sent out of Southern Oregon for the purchase of the "weed" could be retained for circulation, it would, in addition to the manufacture of "sorghum syrup," and the establishment of small wooler factories, make such a change in the next five years in the people's prosperity as to make them wonder at their supineness so far; and it might be worthy of consideration to call the attention of our Legislature, at their next session, to the framing of a law that would hold out inducements to competent men to start manufacturing and mechanical branches of industry among us.

The great difficulty with tobacco planters is to obtain a sufficient number of strong, healthy plants to set out when the proper season arrives, for if the plants are not ready before the spring rains are over, they catch the hot sun and summer drouths, and a sickly crop follows.

It may be taken for granted that all crops depend for their production on the first six week's growth, and if starved and stunted during that time will, in three cases out of four, prove a loss to the cultivator; the importance, then, of having plants ready to transplant when the ground becomes sufficiently warm—say between the 20th of March and 20th of April—can not be overrated, but in the ordinary mode of raising plants in the open air this is not attained, and the result is short crops, and no cabbage, cauliflower, or new potato to garnish the Fourth of July dinner.

If our farmers and gardeners would ponder on the fact that there are few if any vegetables in market before the 1st of September, and that watermelons, instead of being for sale in the dog-days, do not find their way to the consumer till early Autumn, it would be as apparent to them as it is to me that "there is something rotten in the State of Denmark," and a change for the better is desirable; and it is to aid in bringing about that change that I take the liberty of addressing farmers on the subject, asking them to give the suggestions in my next letter a fair trial, and if they derive the benefit from them that I think and hope they will, remember it is to the SENTINEL they are indebted for the information.

HIBERNIA.

Mr. Camp, becoming enthusiastic, and holding out his brawny hand cried out, exultingly:
"What does that look like?"
"That," interposed Mr. Ames, with a peculiar snuff of the nose—"that looks as though you were out of soap."

Why are sheep the most dissipated, reckless and unfortunate of creatures? Because they gamble in youth, frequent the turf, think it no disgrace to be blacklegs, and are often fleeced.
