

THE OREGON SENTINEL

MUSTERED OUT OF SERVICE.—Colonel Steinhilber, of the First Volunteer Infantry, Washington Territory, has been mustered out of service by order of the Secretary of War. The nominal reason assigned is that the regiment has fallen below the minimum standard prescribed by law. If Colonel Steinhilber had a better reputation for loyalty he would undoubtedly have retained his commission, and it is not mere gossip to say that coppery military men on the Pacific coast stand upon slippery places about these days.

ANOTHER SYNCHRONISM.—Early this morning the Quartermaster's Department in this city was thrown into a great commotion by the sudden stoppage of all the moving forces of the Department, the heads—teamsters, helpers and laborers—having simultaneously struck for higher wages. Of course, such a standstill was impossible and not to be endured, and the great trains of supplies going forward could not be detained, so the demands of the men, which were reasonable, were acceded to, and the Secretary of War issued an order directing all heads of bureaus in his Department employing laborers to raise the pay of the men to such a standard as should be deemed by them sufficiently liberal to prevent future strikes.—Washington Cor. Ser. Chron. Nov. 25.

PORT ANGELOUS (W. T.) DESTROYED.—We learn from private sources that the town of Port Angelous, which was selected by Victor Smith as the port of entry for Paget Sound District, was almost entirely swept into the Simits of Fuca, about two weeks since, by the slide of the hill, caused by an overflowing of a pond in rear of the town. The Deputy Collector, and three or four others were instantly killed. Dr. Gunn, Collector, barely escaped with his life. The Dogan House, with all its contents, and several other buildings, comprising the main part of the town, are swept away. The residence of Victor Smith, now absent in Washington, was completely crushed, and his wife and family only escaped by the furniture supporting the ruins, thus affording them shelter on the floor. We could not learn any particulars beyond what we have given.

On the La Crosse railroad, one day in September, a newly married couple were taking their wedding journey. The bride was pretty and the groom devotedly fond of her, as appeared from the frequent little kisses that he printed on her cheek. Behind them sat a worthy pious maiden lady, about 65 years of age. The happiness of this world had no charms for her, it was all transitory, and a good deal mixed up with sin, or she erred in her estimate of the compound. She had been all the time, for the past 45 years, looking to the future; that is, to the future world, where they don't get married and ride in the cars. But this young and happy couple sat right in front of her; she couldn't help seeing them, and though a little deaf, once in a while she heard a snick that made her scowl in contempt of connubial bliss.

They passed through a tunnel—long, dark tunnel; and as they entered it, the bridegroom was standing up, to get a view of the great work from a window a little ahead of his own seat. Just before they emerged from the darkness, the pious good soul of a maiden lady screamed! All hands were alarmed. They thought the tunnel had fallen in. But it hadn't. A second more, and daylight flashed in. There was the bridegroom by the side of the maiden lady, his nose under her hood—and she had been kissed in her life, "just once." But the little bride didn't care, for she knew he had made a mistake.—Hartford Times.

THE BEAUTY OF A WOMAN'S ARM.—Who has not felt the beauty of a woman's arm—the unspeakable suggestions of tenderness that lie in the dimpled elbow and all the varied gently lessening curves down to the delicate wrist, with its thinnest, almost imperceptible nicks in the firm softness? A woman's arm touched the soul of a great sculptor two thousand years ago, so that he wrought an image of it for the Parthenon which moves us still as it clasps lovingly the time worn marble of a headless trunk.

An individual having been arraigned for drunkenness, asserted that he was not drunk for he knew what he was about all the time. In this plea he said: "If I war drunk and know'd I war drunk, then I war'n't drunk; but if I war drunk and didn't know I war drunk, then I war drunk."

"Well," said a Yankee, proudly, to a traveling Scot as they stood by the Falls of Niagara, "is not that wonderful? In your country you never saw anything like that!"

"Like that," quoth the latter; "there's a far mair wonderful concern no twa miles frae whaur I was born."

"Indeed?" says Jonathan; "and pray what kind of a concern may it be?"

"Why, mon," replied the other, "it's a peacock wi' a wooden leg!"

"The Democracy were moving" again, in this region, last week. Several horses were stolen.—American Flag
