Miss Major Pauline Cushman.

Among the women of America who have made themselves famous sloce the opening of the rebellion, few have soffered more or rendered more to the Federal cause than Miss Major Pauline Cushman, the female scout and spy. At the commencement of hostilities she resided in Cleveland, Ohio, and was quite well known as an actress. From Cleveland she went to Louisville. where she had an engagement in Wood's Theater. Here by her intimacy with certain rebel officers she incured the suspicion of being a rebel, and was arrested by the Federal authorities. She indignantly de' nied that she was a rubel, although born at the South, and having a brother in a rebel Mississippi regiment.

In order to test her love for the old flag, she was asked if she would enter into secret service of the Government. She readily O.F. GIFFIN, consented, and was at once employed to earry letters between Louisville and Nashville. She was subsequently employed by Gen Rosecrans, and was for many months with the Army of the Cumberland. She visited the rebel lines time after time, and was thoroughly acquainted with all the country in Tennessee, Northern Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, in which section she rendered our armies invaluable service. She was twice suspected of being a spy, and taken prisoner, but managed to escape.

At last however she was not so fortunate. After our forces had captured Nashville, Major Cushman [Miss Cushman was commissioned Major by the President for her Government .- En. SEN.] made a scont towards Shelbyville to obtain information of the strength of the enemy and while returning to Nashville was captured on the Hardin Pike eleven miles from the latter city. She was placed on a horse, and in charge of two scouts was being taken to Spring Hill, the headquarters of Forcest.

While on the way to this place, she pretended sickness and said she gould not travel any further without falling from her horse. Her captors stopped at a house on the roadside, when it was accertained that a Federal scouting party had passed the house an hour before. Knowing that her gaurds had important papers for Gen-Bragg the quick-witted spy seized the fact and schemed to use it to ber advantage-

Seeing an old negro, who appeared to her opportunity and placed ten dollars in Tennessee money in his hand, saying, "Run up the road, Uncle, and come back in a few minutes, telling us, that four hundred Federals are coming down the street.' The faithful negro obeyed the order literlaly, and soon came back in the greatest excitement, telling the story. The rebeis told him he lied. The old colored man got down on his knees, saying, "Massa, dey's cumia' sare nuff ; de Lord help us, dey is cumin'."

The scouts at this believed the story, and mounting their horses skedaddled for the woods. Miss Cushman seized a pistol belonging to a wounded soldier in the house. also mounted her horse and fied to Frank lin. She traveled through the rain, and after nightfall lost her way. Soon came the challenge of a picket. "Who goes there?" Thinking she had reached the rebel lines, she said: "A friend of Jeff Davis." "All right," was the reply; "adance and give the countersign." She pro sented the countersign in the shape of a RYAN'S NEW BRICK, canteen of whiskey. In this way she passed five; but the sixth and last was obdurate. She pleaded that she was going to see a sick uncle in Franklin, but the sentry couldn't see it. Sick and disheartened she SENTINEL OFFICE & U.S. HOTEL turned back. Seeing a light at a farmhouse, she sought shelter. An old man received her kindly, showed her to a room, and said he would awake her at an early hour in the morning and show her the road to Franklin.

A loud knock awoke her in the morning from her Leathean slumbers, and upon arousing she found her horse and saddle with the two guards from whom she escaped the previous afternoon. She was taken to the headquarters of Forrest, and he sent her after a critical examination to Gen. Bragg. Nothing could be found against her until a secesh woman stole her gaiters. under the sole of which was found important documents which clearly proved her to be a spy.

She was tried and condemned to be executed as a spy, but being sick, her execution was postponed. She finally after laying in her prison three months, sent for Gen. Bragg, and asked him if he had no merey. She received from him the comforting assurance that he should hang her as soon as she got well enough to be bung decently.

While in this state of suspense the army of Rosecrans commenced its forward movement, and one fine day the rebel town where she was imprisoned was surprised and cap tored, and the heroine of this tale was, to her great joy, released.
