DESTROYING THE ROMANCE.—A story is told of a young fellow who, one Sunday, strolled into a church in West Philadelphia, and, during the service, was electrified by the sparkle of a pair of black eyes which were riveted on his face.

"Noble young creature," thought I, "her artless and warm heart is superior to the bounds of custom."

"I reached within a stone's throw of her—she suddenly halted, and threw her face towards me. My heart swelled with bursting. I reached the spot where she stood. She began to speak, and I took off my hat as if doing reverence to an angel.

"No, my dear, that is not my present occupation."

"Well, I don't know," continued she, not very bashfully, eyeing me sternly. "I thought when I saw you in the meeting house that you looked like the pedler that passed a power half dollar on me about a week ago, and so I was determined to keep my eye on you."

He then looked at her and she at him, and he said to her: "I have caught the fellow he will bring his neck for him; and I ain't sure but you are the good for nothing rascal after all."

SAVED.—There is a world of joy shut up in that little word saved. How many a dawn of rich and golden beauty for the soul has it ushered in after a gloomy night of deferred hopes and anxious watching.

It is always a sweet word to hear—a sweeter word to speak. So full of happy meaning when the lips utter it. So full of happier meaning when the heart feels it. The voice never breathes it but the face becomes radiant with joy, and the eyes sparkle with delight.

Every chord vibrates with inexpressible pleasure, as the music falls upon the ear, long waiting in anxious expectation.

It has a history of its own, written in the mingled experience of joy and sorrow of many a soul. Few there are who have uttered it with more or less a meaning, through whose soul it has not sent a thrill of delight, filling too full for utterance.

Sound it out on the still of night, and some aching heart will take it up and send it back upon the gloom and darkness. It is the avenue through which the soul breathes out its overflowing gratitude. Its whole expression is that of thankfulness.

Saved! and from what? Ah! from a life of intemperance, misery, of crime, of degradation, of shame, of infamy and from death. If you have known, kind reader, what it is to have the object of your heart's best affections snatched from any of these calamities, you would find no word that would so fitly express the outgushing thankfulness of your heart, as the little word—Saved!

Reason loves to walk arm in arm with truth, to make itself thought respectable.

Be pure but not stern; have moral excellence, but don't bristle with it.
