

THE REPORTER AND COL. T. VAULT.

Pay last week and Malone this week, in the "Pony Express," while over the report we gave of the cases of Miller against Col. T. Vault, and the thief Wilkerson. They exhaust the old and stale slang of the Statesman ten years ago, against the proprietor of the Statesman, and against many good citizens of Southern Oregon. They shriek about the indictment against the petty thief, Wm. Wilkerson, and say it was defective, and the fault of the Prosecuting Attorney, Dowell. Bah! It was as good an indictment on its face as was ever written. However, the indictment described the property stolen as the property of Max Muller, and the witnesses before the Grand Jury testified it was the property of Max Muller; but on the trial it appeared Mr. Muller had formed a co-partnership with Mr. Brentano, a short time before the larceny was committed. Wilkerson was, on Wednesday last, again indicted for stealing the property of Muller & Brentano, and the thief pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the penitentiary for one year.

The Prosecuting Attorney never neglected the business of the State to assist Col. T. Vault to get the Reporter. The Col. don't want the Reporter. He has no suit for or against the Reporter. He has nothing to do with it or any of its conductors. He is only defending his rights, at present, against the suit of J. N. T. Miller. Col. T. Vault don't intend to sue the Reporter. He only intends to sue those who have wantonly violated his rights. At the last term of our court he expected, and still expects, the publishers of the Reporter to run it as long as they can raise the money to pay the printers, and as long as the printers and paper dealers will credit them, or until the next term of the Circuit Court. So, give vent to your spleen against Dowell: it will give him some notoriety and a little more business; but don't be alarmed too soon about the Reporter or indictments. The Prosecuting Attorney will probably live to assist in defending the rights of Col. T. Vault, and to draw several bad indictments and many good ones before all the Pony Express, petty thieves, or traitors get justice.

If we were disposed to retaliate or desired to become "worthy of the steel" of Fay or Pat, we would try to learn a few of the Billingsgate phrases that have appeared in the Statesman against Pat. But we for bear, as we are illiterate and have no natural talents that way, and abhor hypocrisy. The Grecians punished many offenders without hanging, by branding with a hot iron on the forehead or hands, and sometimes the name of the offender and his crime were inscribed on a pillow, and exposed to public view. God, in his mercy, has so branded Pat, that no hot iron is necessary, and it is a pity for Col. T. Vault to recover the type of the Reporter, because the larger Pat runs it the plainer his crimes, and those of his party will be exposed to public view.

Editor of the Sentinel.—The leading editorial of the Reporter of Feb. 22), on the subject of Emigration, has in it many remarkable assertions, which would lead one to suppose that the editor still thinks himself in Ireland, holding forth in some shanty to a audience of one-legged bog-trotters, instead of writing matter to be read by an American public. The whole article abounds in such boldly-asserted falsehoods, such utter disregard of the truth of history, that no man of common sense or the least self-respect would be responsible for them to an intelligent public. Not wishing to trespass on your columns, I shall only quote one or two sentences from this wonderful production. He says: "If the Puritan commonwealth continues to influence the nation, and the Puritan element of American society continues to dominate the politics of the country, there will, and can, be no liberty for those who dissent from that element in opinion or action. There will not even be toleration for them. A Puritan's ideal of liberty is to have liberty himself and the right to take what liberties he pleases with others."

Between the Irishman and your canting, smugling Uriah Heap of a Puritan there is an instinctive antipathy, a natural antagonism. They are the antipodes of one another in personal character. The one is all head and the other all heart.

In a late number of his paper the editor of the Reporter attacks our common school system, and our school books. The schools, because to educate the people is a Puritan institution; and the books, because they teach Puritan morals and Puritan ideas of government, and, as he says, these schools and these books are abolishing the American people, and has penetrated the power of the pure Democracy, to which the all-headed men so naturally attached themselves. He recommends to the Democracy a list of authors to be studied by themselves and children which he thinks will, the progress of Puritanism, or at least save the Democracy from its dangerous influences. A list of these books you published in the SENTINEL of the 18th February. It is true there are few attendants of these Puritan schools, over the age of twelve years, who have not learned that the Puritan, (which term includes all sects of Protestants who reject Episcopacy), were the first Christian people since the establishment of the Church by Constantine, who have practiced as well as preached toleration to all religions beliefs. As a political party, they have ever been Republicans. In a word to them, modern Europe as well as America, owes all the civil and religious liberty enjoyed by its people. These facts they learn from the very authors this vile slanderer quotes, and truly quotes as good text books for the study of Democrats. I want no better, nor no other witnesses to vindicate the character of the noblest, the bravest, and the purest race of men that has ever yet inhabited the earth.

NASBY IN DIFFICULTY.

ON 2 THE WING, Nov. 10, 1864. The dy is kast! All is ore! If Freedom shrouded when Kosshuseo fell, she must have squaked last Toody nite as she beheld the inany-mal' corps uv the Dimeymerate party, which fell, crushing Little Mack, and the hopes uv sum hundreds uv good Dimeymerats, who spected to be persuaded by their 'friends' to acceptin' the variis offers under the Government.

I am a lost and ruined man. My people are of the true Dimeymerate stripe. They hev faith in me. They believe wat I tell em, I told em Me' Lehan was certin uv the election, and that I had deal wood on the disposal of the office in that seckshun. It immo-jily becom an easy matter to borrow munny. It wuz delishful: wood, oh wood, that it could have been perpetual!

When a linnest boy, I read a barrowin' tale of a linnest muther who wuz pursued by frantik wulves, and who saved her own life by droppin her children to sum, wuz by wun. My privit barrel uv whiskey wuz in my study—I wuz saved! I hiect it wuz my whoder and easily wated re-ants. The flocked around it—his took turns at the bung hole.

In one short our, they was steek't upon the plane, and drunk. Then and there I re-vised my charge, and borrowed sich munny and wates as the ungrateful wretches had about em, to make up arrears of salary and sick, and had show to um forever. I shall go to Nuo Gretry.

PERSONAL.—Isaac Haines and George B. Dorris left Jacksonville this week, to try their fortune in the northern country. They were both admitted to the practice of law at the last session of the Supreme Court of Oregon. Mr. Haines was the law student of Judge Prim, and Mr. Dorris of B. P. Dowell, Esq. We wish them great success.

FATAL MINING ACCIDENT.—On the 7th inst., two caves occurred in mining claims on Jackson creek, the first resulting in the death of Thomas Posson, a native of the State of New York, aged thirty-two years; the second, resulting in the death of Christian Shultz, born in Hamburg City, Germany, aged 32 years.

GRAND SUCCESS.—Uncle Billy's hall, on night before last, is universally acknowledged to be one of the finest affairs that ever came off in Jackson county. The table was provided with an abundance of the best delicacies of the season, cooked in the finest style, and arranged in the most attractive manner.

It is lamentable, even to us, to meet so much deficiency as is displayed by the SIX-TISEL. We would prefer having a contemporary who was "A foeman worthy of our steel."—Reporter.

Perhaps, neighbor Quixote, you might gain some laurels if you would visit Bush's castle.

THE official Report of Rev. M. A. Williams, Superintendent of Common Schools, was crowded out this week. It will appear in our next issue.
