a brother, either through the influence of passion, or from mistaken judgment, aboutin the name or under the cloak of the Order, but in the true spirit of its teach ings, and in mild and persuasive language. having a careful guard against invective and abasive epithets-to point out the error of his way, and a just appreciation of his position, and quietly and gently lead him back to the path of daty. This accomplished, the brother saved, the lips should be forever scaled, and the dereliction remain forever a secret buried in the cenotaph of Odd Fellowship.

This duty is equally imperative when a brother or neighbor, either infinenced by passion, privilege, fear or mistaken Judgment, as to right or daty, has committed a political offence, we should be at least equally magnanimous not only to our " fellow," but to our neighbor, as are the ministers of the Government ; and when as amnesty and pardon has been proclaimed and accepted by a return to allegiance, and they thus absolved from the legal consequences of their error, the daties of Odd Fellows would seem clear to extend the hand of greeting and good will; and in the graciousness of love, teach them that the moral and social facalities hold sway, and are dominant in our minds and hearts over the brutal impulses and passions. Invective abuse, harsh epithets, and eynical reflections, should be carefully avoided as tendering to irritate and aggravate the evil; persuasive argument and reason should be the baim to heal the wound and convert the erring, and lead him back to an affectionate and devoted allegiance.

In our daily walk let us constantly keep in mind, and be governed by the precepts of those wholesome proverbs : " A soft answer turneth away wrath," and that our Order. " Love covereth all sins;" also that " Grevious words stir up anger," and that " Hatred stirreth up strife."

In the form of government under which we live, where the citizen is the fountain throughout the world.

" All hall the glorious work of lave,

Upon the earth begun, The angels from their home above, May gaze with rapture down."

Truth, bright, shining, as she stands in strength, and Purity, the last of the trio, admonishes us that we are obligated by the most sacred considerations to violate nelther of these precepts. She meets us in our Lodges, where heart speaks to heart in all the frankness of primeval days. where each brother as he enters, lays aside the mark worn daily in his business life, and stands revealed as he was created the noblest work of God."
