

Shadows on the Stream.

Summer evening shadows
Thickly drawing round;
Summer's beauties blossoms
Strewn all the ground.
Leaving o'er the lustrous,
Ruffled, gray, and old;
Looking from waters,
Green, still, and cold.
When our bright reflections
Dance its surface o'er—
When like careless music
The distant torrents roar;
And the rocks before us
Kiss the water's brim,
Flashing a reflection
Between myself and him!
As we stood together,
Whispering soft and low,
Flung our barbell blossoms
On the waves below.
Laurel leaves were gleaming
Round his shaded hair,
While the rocks were frowning
O'er mine cold and bare!
Sighed they not prophetic
Shadows on the stream?
As when visions haunt us
From a troubled dream.
Many, many summers,
With their wreaths of flowers;
Many, many winters,
With their dreary hours;
Flowing like those waters,
Life's rough pathway down;
Bringing fame's fresh leaflets
For his laurel crown!
By the gray old lustrous
Lonely now I dream;
Slowly, sadly watching
Shadows on the stream!

REMAINS BY ALL MEANS.—A Frenchman at Placerville wishes to know whether, in the event of a war with France, we would advise quiet French miners in this country to emigrate. Certainly not. There could be no objection to industrious French miners remaining in this State, provided they make no active demonstration. But we consider the prospects of a war with France as very faint. —Scr. Union.
