SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 24, 1867

For the Vice Presidency.

For over a year we have swang the name of the Great Captain of the Republic at our mast-head, as our choice for the next President. During this time the drift of public opinion, both in the Atlantic and Pacific States. proves our judgment correct and points out our choice as the "coming man." This week we take the liberty of com-

Geo. H. Williams, of Oregon, for the Vice Presidency. This is our voluntary act. It is not done by reason of any intimation from Senator Williams that such announce ment would be desirable to him, nor at the solicitation of any of his friends. As we consider Grant the first soldier of the nation, so we regard Williams as its foremost statesman, one whose clear, unimpassioned judgment is not overtopped by partisan zeal, and whose inflexible faith in republican principles is untinetured with fanaticism. Mr. Williams' statesmanship is national, not sectional. It is not circumscribed governed by expediency, but is as broad and deep as the foundations of the Republic itself. What we owe to the soldier for crushing the physical power of the rebellion, we must also accord to the statesman for his masterly solution of the political problems that found birth in the dissolution of the Confederacy. Therefore Grant and Williams are our candidates. We know of no better standard bearers than he whose military skill saved the country, and he whose lofty, comprehensive statesmanship has placed its institutions on the rock of national justice-a foundation that the tide of battle may dash against in vain.

LISH'S EAGLE.-The correspondent of the Oregonian relates, among other things, that Lish Applegate and he, discovered an eagle's nest among the crevices of Pilot Knob. We never knew where Lish kept his "eagle bird" till now, and as the day of their visit was provokingly smoky, we more than half believe that the Webfoot orator climbed that rock on purpose to renew his acquaintance. We just believe that it is the same bird that, with "pinions strong, unquailing eye" and tail-feathers unruffled, has soared with "Lish" o'er snow-clad Hood and icy Never mind, Lish, we'll never tell where you keep your eagle. Save him for your next campaign, and when next you meet the enemy, give them the Star Spangled Banner, Yankee Doodle and the bird of Freedom, and if any rebel or Copperhead in Oregon survives the dose, we lose our guess.

A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE.-During the week we were shown a most elaborate and beautifully engraved Scriptural illustration, entitled "The Lord's Prayer." The touching and beautiful poetry of our Saviors simple appeal to the Creator has been blended and harmonized with the poetry of art, and is illustrated with the prominent scenes of his own life, from the Nativity to the Resurrection. The twelve Apostles form a wreath, over which is an engraving of the Nativity, and inside of which is the "Prayer," wrought in letters symbolical of the subject, and showing the beauty of the artist's conception. The engraving is taken from an original work, executed with a pen, by an eminent American artist, Delvin Brown, of New York, and the "scenes," and "heads" of the Apostles are said to be striking copies of the original painting, in European galleries. Apart from the religious and devotional inspiration of this engraving, as a work of art it has no equal, and surpasses anything of the kind we have ever seen. It should find a place in every household. Rev. W. H. Cain is at present canvassing this county for subscribers to the picture of "the Lords Prayer," and is we learn, meeting with excellent success. The price of the largest is only $5 00, which is within the means of of all who desire so instructive an or. address, it does not become us to against the philosophical truth. When an enlightened public sentiment declares that the organic law of the land has been changed, Democracy steps forward and declares that it is unchangable. The incessant, continued howl of Democracy is, "The Constitution." Some of the fossils of Democracy vary the slogan by demanding "the Constitution as it was;" others, apparently with a view to rhetorical display, shelter themselves behind the "ægis of the Constitution," without understanding the meaning of the instrument. Both classes seem to forget in their ravings the essential and historical fact, that the Constitution of topleting the ticket by adding the name of day is a very different thing from the Constitution of seven years since. They seem to torget that within the last seven years we have had an awful conflict with a confederacy of rebellious States, under authority of a Constitution of their own, and which utterly repudiated the Constitution of the Unito establish a separate government for themselves. On the empowering section of the Constitutional Amendment rests each and all of the reconstruction acts of Congress, and if Congress, in its efforts to bring order and good government out of chaos and anarchy, has given the widest scope and meaning to that section, the exigencies of the case fully justify them in so doing. Democracy may cease its howling about the Constitution. It is but idle sound and fury-nothing more. Under the Constitution as it is, will the disaffected States be reconstructed, on principles of humanity and justice-not as they were, but as they should be. The Union as it was and the Constitution filings, 100 grammes of sal ammoniac, Shasta, and that when unused, makes his eyrie near the mountain home of ment as the smoke of the battle-fields of balsam of Copaiva. One of the fell from a load of hay, beneath the of the rebellion-they are with the past, and Democracy will howl in vain for their restoration. There is no going back. National progression may mean national danger, but national retrogression means destruction. If the Democracy would think more and howl less-if they would exchange the abstractions of the past for the realities of the present, and assist in reconstruction instead of obstructing it, precisely as they did the prosecution of the war, sectional hatred would sooner disappear and national unity sconer be accomplished.

> ODD FELLOWS' CELEBRATION .- On Monday last, the Odd Fellows of this county had a demonstration in this place. The exercises throughout were highly creditable to the Order. There was a Dedication of their fine, spacious Hall, a Dedication of their Cemetery and an oration by O. Jacobs. Grand Master, Bloomfield, Bristow, Acting Grand Marshal, and Deputy Grand Master, S. J. Day, were present. The Dedication of their Hall was impressive and solemn. The musical part of the entertainment was the admiration of all. After the dedicatory ceremonies were over, the members of the Order, clothed in their regalia, together with a large number of ladies and gentlemen present, repaired to the Court House where the address was delivered. The address began with a history of Odd Fellowship in this county, by way of introduction to the principal subject of the address, which was a discussion of the cardinal and fundamental principals of Odd Fellowship. Of the merits or demerits of this

SEVERELY INJURED.-Mr. Myers Southworth was yesterday morning driving a young horse to a sulkey, on North Front street. When near the Willamette Iron Works, he was in the act of turning around, the horse, either from fright or vicionsness, gave a sudden plunge forward and commenced running. He went over a pile lumber in the way, and then against the fence enclosing the gas reservoir. Mr. Southworth was thrown out and severely bruised about the face and shoulders and was taken up insensible. When, however, medical attendance was procured, his injuries, though severe, were found not to be of a serious nature. The sulkey was considerably broken.—

WHO PAYS THE TAX .- It is asserted that Democratic citizens pay two-thirds of the Federal tax assessed in Jackson and Josephine counties. We have taken the trouble to ascertain if this be the case, and publish, for the information of all, the actual fact that Republicans pay over four hundred dollars more than half of the Federal tax assessed in the counties named. The same source of information that warrants this statement is open to any one who doubts it accuracy.

RUNAWAY.-Last Sunday, Mr. Herman Helms was riding out with his family, when the king bolt of the buggy broke, and the team became badly frightened and ran home to town, with the detached portion of the vehiele. Fortunately, no one was hurt. Mr. Helms children were thrown over the dash-board of the buggy, but only slightly scratched.

DESERVED COMPLIMENT.-Mr. Malory pays a very high and deserved compliment to Senator Williams, as to the influence he exercises in Washington, and the respect with which he is listened to on the floor of the Senate. Only a few members can induce the laying aside of pens and newspapers, catch the ear and engross the attention of the Senate. Senator Williams is one of the few, and whenever he has the floor, the incidental employments of the time are resigned, and chairs are turned around, so that the members can bring the speaker into full view. Oregon is fortunate in the possession of so distinguished a Senator, and the use of his name in connection with the Vice Presidency is not unwarranted by facts .- Salem Record.
