YELLOW JACKETS. - These troublesome insects are a positive pest this season. It is nearly impossible to dry fruit in the ordinary manuer, so numcross are they. Plums seem to be their tavorite fruit, and some enterpristilication of finding nothing but skins, after it has been exposed a few hours. The excessive number of these torments is probably owing to the long drought -the rain, in ordinary seasons, interfering with their breeding. Any practical suggestions that will enable housekeepers to rid themselves of these nuisances, would be valuable.
