Letter from B. F. Dowell. WASHINGTON CITY, D. C., 19th, July, 1867. MEXICO AND MAX.

Mexico and Maximilian are the absorbing topics of the day. A few Republican papers and nearly all the Democratic ones, of the Atlantic coast, have, during the last three or four weeks, filled the air with doleful lamentations over the death of the Arch Duke Maximilian, and hurled upon the Mexican Government the most furious anathemas, because, obeying the stern demands of justice, they executed a foreign Prince, who, backed by foreign troops, invaded Mexico to destroy the government and rob the people of their liberties.

Maximilian, from the beginning, was considered an ally of the rebellion; so it is not strange that they should desire to have a war with Mexico, and this should be enough to warn Union journals against giving aid and comfort to any of his friends.

These journals may induce a few desperate, restless adventurers, like Lopez, and Walker, to make war, but the government of the United States is too just and too generous to strike blows against the peace and prosperity of a sister Republic without just cause.

and of liberty, "The home of the brave and the land of the free." The filibusters now preparing to invade Mexico, may organize, but if they go to Mexico they will go on a fool's errand, and reap a felon's just reward.

Idleness is the broad and evil avenue through which temptation can walk in.

Kind-Hearted Tanner. The following incident is so beautiful and touching that it should be read in every household in the country. It develops the true active principle of kindness. How many an erring mortal, making his first step in crime, might be redeemed by the exercise of this sublime trait in the character of the kind-hearted Quaker.

Whoever stole a quantity of hides on the fifth of this month, is hereby informed that the owner has a sincere wish to be his friend. If poverty tempted him to this false step, the owner will keep the whole transaction secret, and will gladly put him in the way of obtaining money by means more likely to bring him peace of mind.

THIS IRRESISTIBLE FORCE gives the irrepressible Sambo the privilege of A VOTE. This changes the acts of the would be masters, and the whole phraseology of the Southern press.

Maximilian, from the beginning, was considered an ally of the rebellion; so it is not strange that they should desire to have a war with Mexico, and this should be enough to warn Union journals against giving aid and comfort to any of his friends.

One of those bores who are always suggesting disagreeable things, says: "Great eaters never live long." That may be but they have a good time while it lasts, they think.

The difference between a gambler and a theatrical critic is, that one is a player at poker, and the other a poker at players.

As soon as they were gone out, his wife prepared some hot coffee, and placed pies and meat on the table. When they returned from the barn she said, "Neighbor Smith, I thought some hot supper would be good for thee."

"Let it be the last, my friend," replied William Savery. "The secret lies between ourselves. Thou art still young, and it is in thy power to make up for lost time. Promise me that thou wilt not drink any intoxicating liquor for a year, and I will employ thee to-morrow on good wages."

The poor fellow tried to eat and drink, but the food seemed to choke him. After vainly trying to compose his feelings, he bowed his head on the table and wept freely.

To EXTERMINATE BEDBUGS.—Take of corrosive sublimate, one ounce; alcohol, one pint. Mix, and apply to the haunts of the vermin with a feather. The corrosive sublimate should not be allowed to remain where children can get at it, as it is rank poison.

GEN. GRANT TO GEN. ORD.—On the 23d of June Gen. Grant sent the following order to Gen. Ord: General—A copy of your final instructions to the board of registration, of June 10, 1867, is just received.

U. S. GRANT, General.

Strange stories have from time to time been related of jewels, rings, and watches, found in fishes when caught and subsequently returned to their owner. Whether or not these stories be true, I of course cannot say, but I vouch for the entire truth of the following, related by the clergyman, himself the hero of the story to a wondering circle of listeners.

"It was one summer twilight," said he, "that standing on a bridge which spanned a well-known trout stream near my father's house. I won from the girl I had long loved the promise to be my wife. She was something of a coquette, and I had a rival in the field; so, to make the matter sure to myself, and evident to him and others, I drew from her hand a ring which she had often declared she would give only to her betrothed lover, and transferred it to my own finger."

"Some weeks after she went away on a visit, and then my great consolation was to haunt that favorite spot on the bridge which had been our trysting place. Once, leaning over the railing and thinking of our betrothal, I took from my finger the treasured ring, and gazed fondly on the initials—hers as well as her mother's—engraved within.

"I seized my pocket clasp-knife. Eagerness made me cruel—yet not more so than if I had left my victim to die a slow lingering death. I cut off his head, and then, with a trembling hand, ripped open his body, and explored the suspicious protuberance. My knife grated against something hard, and—yes, I caught the glittering of some shining substance! Imagine my feelings when, with a beating heart and trembling hand I drew forth—"

The general consternation and indignation may be imagined.
