More Lieur.-Lieut.-Gov. Holden. of California, is about to write "the history of Democracy." Access to the State Prison Records will enable him to throw much light on the subject.

Modified.-The office formerly occupied by the Southern Oregon treason mill is being transformed into a whisky mill. It is believed the latter style of machine grinds out Democratic votes

Modest.-It is reported that the projector of the thirty foot road was too modest to ask for a wider one, for fear people might think he wanted to scutthe the County Treasury all at once. Modest young man!

DASTARDLY .- Joseph Wilson fired two shots at a villain, who attempted to throw vitriol in the face of a woman, with whom he was walking on Sunday night in San Francisco. Wilson was fined $500 by the police Judge.

Queny .- The Reveille wants to know why Mr. Jacobs burned the articles of the G. L. W. R. Co. It it will inform us why Mr. Fay sent his famous peti-tion for a thirty finet road out to Link river so stealthily, with special instrucwill answer his query.

Mr. J. Waldo Thompson, the gentlemanly and efficient operator in the Telegraph office here for the last year, has been promoted to the dignity and responsibility of agent. We have no doubt our young friend will wear the honors of the position with becoming modesty, will meet its responsibilities with firmness, and give satisfaction to both his employers and the public. Now, "if he only had black curly hair!"

Mr. James McConaughy is located as Mr. Thompson's assistant. The public will find him a pleasant gentleman as well as an efficient operator. If there ain't a whole team, we would like to know where you can find one .- Yreka

HARMONY !- Our allusion to the muss county for leadership and a fair division of the spoils, has evidently touched and canister, mixed with shell and chain shot, or to a man inside of a boiler, with about five hundred riveting hammers playing the devil's tatto on the outside, the present political atmosphere might seem perfectly tranquil. To us it seems considerably perturbed. We see things from a different point of view from what our neighbor does. It is not our fight, nor our funeral, and we see things just as they are. Harmony! O, yes; you are a very harmonious set-about as much so as a bag of wildcats-meowing and spitting, and scratching; gauging and chiseling, and cheating the outside voters out of their just share of the plander; threatening the cowardly, strong in a most angelic manner.

Verily, you are a very happy family, A Speck of War,-At the Democratic club meeting, on Saturday night, venerable Democrat arose and declared that he had voted the Democratic ticket for forty years, and had never holted it. The would-be leader demanded to know "if he intended to stick to it now?" The old veteran replied that "it depended entirely on circumstances. "He evidently has not got anybody's ring in his nose.

Week after week, we called it a Democratic egg. Did the deluded bantam say nay? No! be rufled his feathers and rolled the pretty egg under his wings, and blinking with owlish satisfaction, he clucked and clucked again in sweet anticipation of approaching maternity(?) But, alas! in an unguarded moment, the bantam was entired from his nest by an old rooster from Link River-the egg was abandoned for another and much smaller one that the old rooster had brought; gestation was stopped, and that egg, so tall of promise, was chilled. O, the stench that arose from that spoiled egg! It offended public opinion, and so dreadful was it in the nostrils of the bantam, that would have warmed it into life, that he now raises a most voiceifrons cackle and declares that it certainly was not a political egg-it was something else, he hardly knows what; and the deluded incubator is very auxious to prove that he never sat on it at all. The history of this egg is a solemn warning to all foolish bantams, never to attempt incubation till they know what they are setting on, and never to attempt to hatch out an egg without first ascertaining whether the public want the chicken or not. In the touching language of the past, we will only suggest:
