

Break-Water at Crescent City.

At the express office will be found a petition to Congress, for a break-water at Crescent City. A similar petition has been circulated and numerous signed by the citizens of Del Norte county, California.

The Chambers of Commerce of Portland and San Francisco, if requested, doubtlessly would unanimously endorse this great improvement towards cheapening transportation for Northern California and Southern Oregon.

This enterprise would not only be of local advantage to this section of the country, but of great national importance. For the safety of the whole of the vessels plying between Puget Sound and San Francisco, this work is absolutely necessary.

Memorial.

To the Hon. Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled: The undersigned, citizens of the town of Crescent City, Del Norte county, State of California, and Southern Oregon, respectfully represent:

First—The interests of commerce on the Pacific coast absolutely require a harbor as a place of refuge for vessels in stress of weather, there being none between San Francisco and Puget Sound, a distance of eight hundred miles, as has been set forth in our petitions to your predecessors, and confirmed and approved by the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco.

Second—That a thorough survey of this port was made by order of Congress, by United States engineers, whose reports are on file in the Departments in Washington City, and demonstrate the fact that this is the proper place for such a work, and the opinion of navigators on this coast is that it should be there.

Third—That the report of Lieutenant Huce, who investigated the matter in 1867, by order of Congress, shows that suitable material for the work exists in abundance in the immediate vicinity, and that the work can be done at a moderate cost.

Fourth—That a heavy and increasing amount of lumber is shipped from this port; that an unlimited amount of copper can be produced from our mines in the vicinity, whenever the revival of our shipping and general commercial interests shall create a demand for it, and also that we are shipping large quantities of chrome, of which our mountains afford an inexhaustible amount, which is essential to the production of Bessemer steel, so important to the extension and improvement of the railroad system of the whole country, and that the proposed work would greatly cheapen all these important articles, to the benefit of all consumers.

We would therefore ask your Honorable Body to pass a law, and make an appropriation, so that said work shall be done, and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Crescent City, Del Norte county, California, June 20th, 1871.

The Paris Commune.

The execution of Cluseret completes the extermination of the one hundred and six members of the Commune Government, with the exception of Pyat and Grousset, who have not yet been found. Cluseret might well have been spared at an earlier day, for he did infinite mischief to the cause which he aspired.

An Editor Assaulted.

The Engene Journal gives the following account of a cowardly assault: We have the particulars of an affray which took place at Salem on Wednesday afternoon. W. H. Watkins, Superintendent of the Penitentiary, taking offense at an article which appeared in the Statesman of that day, met the editor, S. A. Clarke, in Myers' store on Commercial street, armed with a revolver and cowhide, and began using the latter over Mr. Clarke's head.

Mr. Clarke was hauled home, and Watkins was put under bonds of $1,000 to appear before Justice Murphy on Thursday. This is probably the most cowardly assault ever made upon any one in this State. Watkins is a man of uncommon vitality and strength, while Clarke has no more strength than a child.

W. H. Watkins was at first put under $1,000 bail to appear in Court and answer for this atrocious crime, but the bail has since been raised to $5,000.

A VERY general indignation is felt among all classes of people in Germany at the unfounded assertion which has appeared in the London Times, to the effect that articles of value, belonging in the apartments occupied by the Emperor William of Versailles, had been taken, along with his baggage, to Germany. The Kreuz Zeitung declares this "infamous and miserable calumny to be the most groundless, despicable, and self-evident falsehood ever published by the English press."

Portland City Election.

The Oregonian in speaking of the city election, held in Portland on the 19th inst., says: "The success of the Republican ticket in the municipal election was complete. Every Ward was carried and every candidate on the Republican ticket was elected. The majorities are large, but they would have been larger had a general effort been made on the part of Republicans. The opposition did not contest the election in very strong force. The result is another proof that Portland is a reliably Republican city."

German Parliament.

The session of the German Parliament opened, June 15th, with a speech from the Emperor; he thanked the members for grants they had made for the support of widows and orphans of soldiers killed in the war, reviewed the legislation of the session, referring particularly to the debate on the bill incorporating Alsace and Lorraine. He said that it showed however Germans might differ, the spirit of union was strong with them. The Emperor closed his speech with: "May God grant peace to this new Empire."

Health Reform Society.

A correspondent from Buena Vista, Oregon, to the Oregonian says: The annual meeting of the Oregon and Washington Health Reform Association was held in this place, commencing on the 7th inst., and closing on the evening of the 8th. The annual address was delivered by Mrs. J. C. Hill, wife of W. Lair Hill, Esq., of Portland, to a densely crowded house, that manifested its appreciation by the most perfect order I ever saw, and by hearty cheering at the close. The address was excellent—full of sound, solid, practical thought, well written and remarkably well delivered. It certainly did great credit to the talented and graceful young speaker.

A GAS ENGINE.—Says the New Orleans Times: A great curiosity is to be seen at J. B. Knight's machinery establishment on Carondelet street, near Poydras. No less than a stationary steam engine, running without steam. Mr. Knight, having had occasion lately to bore for water at the depth of forty seven feet, encountered a flow of natural gas, with such a pressure, that on attaching it to the engine with a flexible pipe, it drove it with ease. When we witnessed it operating, the gauge marked a pressure of twelve pounds to the square inch, and the gas from the discharge pipe was burning brilliantly. An engine, apparently furnishing its own power, and a brilliant light to see it by, comes nearer to the realization of a perpetual motion machine than any yet reached.

High Water.

The lower Willamette and Columbia river have overflowed their banks, much damage is done, and the loss is likely to prove very great. The flood now exceeds in height anything since 1862, and, says the Oregonian, "the swelling tide continues to swell." A considerable portion of Portland, as well as East Portland, is under water. Lewis River, W. T., is also reported very high; the crops on the bottom lands of that river are all gone.

The Vancouver Register says the damage to farmers in Clarke county from high water will reach $100,000. Many have lost their whole crops.

More New Departure.

The Democracy of the Twenty-first Civil District, Tennessee, the second largest outside of Nashville, at a Convention, May 31st, adopted the following:

Inasmuch as the present Constitution of the State of Tennessee gives to the colored man every civil and political right enjoyed by the white man, it follows that the validity of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States forms no substantial issue before the people of Tennessee. Therefore, in our opinion, no person or paper that shall only want to continue the agitation of that question is entitled to the confidence or support of the Democracy of this State.

The report of the Convention goes on to say:

The list of signers embraces Ex-Governor Henry S. Foote, late member of the Confederate Congress; Hon. J. C. Thompson, of the late State Constitutional Convention; Rev. A. L. P. Green, and a number of others, among the most influential and best citizens of the State, many of whom were practical rebels during the war. The resolutions will be signed as they are now indorsed by every Democratic voter in the Twenty-first District, and will undoubtedly be adopted in every county in the State.

Vallandigham Accidentally Shoots Himself.

The Commercial, June 17th, has the following account of the accident to Mr. Vallandigham: "It appears that no one was present with Mr. Vallandigham when the accident occurred but Ex-Lieut. Governor McBurney, who had been associated with him in the defense of McGehean. McBurney had expressed some doubt as to the theory that Myers had shot himself, and Mr. Vallandigham picked a pistol from the table, saying he would show him in half a second. Two pistols were on the table—one unloaded—and he by mistake took up the loaded one. He put it in his pocket and withdrew it, keeping the muzzle next to his body. Just as it was leaving his pocket it was discharged, the ball entering, it is said, near the same place Myers was shot. He at once ejaculated 'Oh, murderer,' and said he had taken the wrong pistol. While the examination was going on, he watched the surgeons at work with eager eyes, and even assisted them in their search for the ball. He died at 18 minutes to 10 o'clock this forenoon."

of the morning sun are shining. The effect of this light is magical. It is like that produced upon a man in the recesses of a cavern, gazing out upon a sun-lit scene. Magnitude is an element of grandeur. The Big Canyon has magnitude.

Mr. Holladay's engineers have vainly explored these regions in search of another pass for the railroad; and it is the iron track ever penetrates this defile, its scenery will become celebrated.

On the summit of the canyon mountains we leave Douglas county and enter Jackson. The water flows down toward Rogue River. This is an unfortunate name; and as it attaches a stigma to the early white settlers, it ought to be changed. It is no doubt a corruption of the French word Rouge—the transposition of a single letter. This word signifies red, and is also a surname. It is a violation of all propriety to apply such an opprobrious epithet to that picturesque stream, and to that beautiful valley—or to call the people who live there rogues.

The road to the plain is intersected by ranges of hills, which bear the names of the creeks that run between them. With these are connected the traditions of Indian barbarities and mining operations.

We passed a company of tourists at Roseburg. In one of these valleys we met another party from an Atlantic State. They had chartered the stage, inside and out; and were evidently bent on enjoying all that Oregon had to offer. More than half of them were young ladies. We welcomed them all to Oregon, and to a long stay in it. Ruth does not stay here long without Boaz—unless she is too particular. But if only the good article is accepted, where is woman's pity for the poor? Leaving the hills, chapparel and sagebrush are more abundant reminders of the great continental plains. Sugar pines and pitch pines lift themselves high above the oaks—stiff and prime like sentinels over the other trees. A long and gentle declivity and firm road, favor our progress. That distant range, glimpses of which we caught, at length lifts its impenetrable shades across our path. It is the Siskiyou, on the Southern border of the State. We turn eastward, cross Rogue River at Rock Point, on a long and lofty bridge, pass through Willow Springs, and reach Jacksonville before midnight.

A LARGE VOLUME would not contain the mass of testimony which has accumulated in favor of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry as a safe, efficient and reliable remedy in curing coughs, colds, and pulmonary disease. Many of the cures are truly wonderful.

HOW TO CURE IT. At the commencement of the Diarrhoea, which always precedes an attack of the Cholera, take a teaspoonful of the Pain Killer, in sugar and water, (hot, if convenient,) and then bathe freely the stomach and bowels with the Pain Killer clear. Should the diarrhoea or cramps continue, repeat the dose every ten or fifteen minutes until the patient is relieved. In extreme cases, two or more teaspoonfuls may be given at a dose.

The Pain Killer, as an internal remedy has no equal. In cases of Cholera, Summer Complaints, Dyspepsia, Dysentery, Asthma, it cures in one night, by taking it internally and bathing with it freely. Its action is like magic when externally applied to Old Sores, Burns, Scalds, and Sprains. For sick headache and toothache don't fail to try it. In short, it is a Pain Killer.

Directions accompany each bottle. The Pain Killer is sold by all druggists in Medicines. Price 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1 per bottle. June 11
