The President's View.

The following is President Grant's message to Congress, containing his opinion regarding the action of the Senate in rejecting the bill for raising the salary of judges and the various judges and justices of the United States courts.

To the Senate of the United States:

I submit the bill for raising the salaries of judges and the various judges and justices of the United States courts. The bill has been passed by the House of Representatives, and is now before your body for consideration. I am actuated by the same motives that prompted the action of Congress in the past, and I am confident that the measure will receive your approval.

The bill provides for an increase in the salaries of the judges of the United States courts, and it is expected that the action of Congress will be in accordance with the wishes of the people. I believe that the measure will be of great benefit to the judicial system of the country, and I am confident that it will be received with the approval of the people.

The bill has been carefully prepared and thoroughly considered, and I am satisfied that it is just and equitable. I believe that the action of Congress will be in accordance with the wishes of the people, and I am confident that the measure will receive their approval.

I am, therefore, confident that the measure will be of great benefit to the judicial system of the country, and I am satisfied that it will be received with the approval of the people.

Very respectfully,

[Signature]

The President.
