Science as a Detective.-An emery wheel, guaranteed to stand 600 revolutions, was run at the speed of 1,-000 revolutions, and burst, doing a large amount of damage. A suit to recover was instituted, based on a letter written by the seller of the wheel, in which the strength of the wheel was rated at 1,600 revolutions. While in the office of the prosecutor endeavoring to effect a settlement, the defendent observed that a certain make of ink was used, and he learned by a casual inqury that the same ink was used exlusively by the prosecutor. The fendant had for several years used other ink. Taking samples of the two inks to a chemist, he was able after an alysis to secure a solvent for the one which would not effect the other. The case came to trial. Evidence was taken as to the kind of ink each party employed. Then the chemist was called and in the presence of the jury applied the solvent, which removed the interpolated "1," and left the rest of the rust off anything, mix with warm wa- writing untouched. The proof of the forgery was sufficient, and the case was dismissed, leaving the dishonest prosecutor to defend himself from a

Frank Pixley, editor of the San Francisco "Argonaut" is reported as having observed to a newspaper representative, recently, after his visit up the Columbia: "I had read about Oregon, but had no more idea of its grandeur and magnificence than I have of some distant South American State. I'm going to bring Stanford and some of our capitalists up here this summer and let them see what they have missed by staving away. We want your State connected with ours by all means, and San Francisco could well afford to issue bonds and build 270 miles of railroad and and supply the missing link. I'm not
