

THE OREGON SENTINEL

JACKSONVILLE: WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1880.

FOR PRESIDENT, JAS. A. GARFIELD, Of Ohio. FOR VICE PRESIDENT, CHESTER A. ARTHUR, Of New York. PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS, GEO. B. CURRY, of Grant. E. L. APPELGATE, of Lin. C. B. WATSON, of Lake.

THE FIVE MILLION CANDIDATE.

Two days before the Cincinnati nominations were made the Cincinnati [Democratic] "Enquirer" said of English that he was "a man without a blemish and has five millions of dollars." The inference to be drawn from this is that the dollars of Mr. English are "a qualification" to entitle him to the Vice Presidency. The "Enquirer" argument had no doubt great weight with the delegates of the convention that nominated Mr. English but we doubt whether the American people will look at that gentleman's claim in that light. The fact is that a man can go to Congress a poor man and at the end of four years retire from office worth five millions of dollars we apprehend will not weigh much in the mind of the ordinary American voter. Nor do we think that Mr. English is any better man for being the President of a National bank of Indianapolis. The fact may have its attractions in Democratic Conventions, but with the great mass of American voters it certainly has not.

CENSUS MATTERS.

The Lakeview "Examiner" says the list of inhabitants filed with the county clerk by the census enumerators foot up a total population in Lake county of 3,783. That portion of the county lying west of Drews valley has a population of 1,378. The district in which Lakeview is situated includes Gospe Lake, Lakeview and New Pine creek voting precincts, and has a population of 905. The northern district includes the voting precincts of Crooked creek, Cherasuan, Silver Lake, and Lake county.

The Democratic party has for ten years vehemently opposed the selection of military Presidents as contrary to sound policy and as dangerous to the liberties of the people. To set up in business as a soldier's party, is on the face of it, an abandonment of the cardinal tenet of the party faith. Gen. Hancock, its nominee for President, has been a soldier all his life. Educated at West Point at Government expense he has never held any other than a military position. He has for more than 20 years been drawing pay of a Major-General of the United States Army. General Grant in speaking of Gen. Hancock says: "His military record is good, but the record of the party which has put him in nomination is bad."

The decoy duck game was attempted by the Democracy eight years ago, when they tried to ride into power on the back of one of the oldest and most pronounced Abolition Republican leaders. They failed. The decoy duck game is to be tried again, and the party has mounted the back of a Union General for the purpose. They will certainly fail, for the American people are not caught by decoy ducks.

A Montreal dispatch to Chicago says the Canadian Pacific Railway has been purchased by a company of London bankers who contemplate an extensive colonization scheme in connection with the railway construction. The company is worth $100,000,000 and expect to reach the Pacific coast in British Columbia in three years.

The London "Telegraph" in speculating on the future of America believes that the census of 1880 will show our population to have increased to fifty millions, especially if the immigrants now pouring into the United States are not omitted from the calculation.

George Howard has been appointed deputy City Marshal, to act in the absence of the chief. The Aurelian is ahead.

The text of the new city charter of San Francisco fills 33 columns of the "Chronicle."

THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEE.

Speaking of the Republican nominee for President, Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper (Ind.) of June 26th says: The nomination of General James A. Garfield as the Republican candidate for President affords another proof that the people are stronger than the politicians. It postpones, too, if it does not entirely avert, a disaster which at one time seemed to overtake the party. * * * Of General Garfield, summoned so unexpectedly to the leadership, it can be said with entire truth that he represents the best impulses of the party. A Republican all his life, his career has never been marked by that excessive partisanship which too often impairs the legitimate influence of great minds; indeed, his peculiarly judicial temper has more than once betrayed him into attitudes which the party "whigs" have condemned; but it is precisely this quality of independence which will most commend him to popular confidence. In Congress he always kept fully abreast of public opinion as to all questions of national importance. Born poor, he has remained so, comparatively, amid all the temptations of public life; possessing in his early childhood only the slenderest educational opportunities, he has come, by his own efforts and the closest study, to rank as the most scholarly of war statesmen; he is, in a word, a self-made man, in every respect a typical product of our free institutions.

Will he be elected? That will depend largely upon the action of the Democratic Convention. It has a great opportunity. It is possible for it to nominate a candidate who would command success. It is also possible for it to select a nominee who would be more objectionable than General Garfield to the moral sense of the country, and to place him upon a platform still less satisfactory than that laid down at Chicago. The one overshadowing issue is that of the national finances and the maintenance of the national faith. Upon that question the Republicans have, in the main, occupied no uncertain attitude. To them we owe the policy of resumption, with all its inefficient results, and the defeat of all the perilous schemes for the debasement of the currency and the unsettling of the foundations of the public credit. In the course of the struggle over this issue, General Garfield has been foremost in the paper money delusions, and has time flourished so luxuriantly that the exact fulfillment of the nation's obligations to its creditors.

The facts developed by the Census of 1880 has given rise to a great deal of unpleasant criticism on the part of some St. Louis journalists. They are mad at the enumerators because these officials did not find as many people as were expected, nor even as many as were found in the rival city of Chicago. The fact that Chicago has 502,845 and St. Louis only 375,000, is too much for the ardent St. Louis editor, who had educated himself in the belief that St. Louis was the boss city of the Mississippi valley. As the figures now stand St. Louis shows a gain in ten years of 64,936, whereas Chicago rolls up an increase of 203,868, establishing the fact that it is the fourth city in the Union.

Supposing President Hayes, as commander-in-chief of the army, should issue an order to Maj. Gen. Hancock, commanding the Department of the East, to see that the civil authorities of the cities of New York and Brooklyn should be supported in their efforts to prevent illegal voting and mobs at the polls! To do so might cost him his election, and to refuse might cost him his commission. They can thus see the impolicy of nominating a regular army officer, who cannot serve his country and his party at the same time. Hancock is now one of Hayes' hirelings, and if so ordered, must "trample upon the rights of freemen." But this is the usual logical way that party has of doing things.

The Portland "Standard," preferring caution to wholesome food, devotes on an average three columns per day in a vain effort to besmirch the character of Gen. Garfield, the Republican nominee for President. So far the attacks have fallen harmless at the feet of an enlightened public, as the good citizen of every party frowns upon the venture or jacked whose only stock in trade is to attack private and personal character without the most distant regard to truth and veracity.

Hancock is to furnish the military prestige to catch the votes of the North while the brigadiers furnish the statesmanship in the interest of the solid South. That is dividing the responsibility but not the spoils.

The Dubuque, Iowa, "Herald" says that "the nomination of Hancock will give the people confidence in the Democratic party. This is a frank admission that it never had it before."

A TREELY VALUABLE BOOK.

We have just received from the publishers, Messrs. Warren & Co., of Chicago, a copy of the enlarged and improved edition of Hill's Manual, a handsomely bound quarto volume, with elegant illustrations and plates, on fine heavy paper, making it mechanically one of the finest specimens of book work. While as a manual it is superior to any other publication we have seen, and the various chapters treat of the following subjects, viz: Penmanship, which is profusely illustrated, and accompanied with the finest lithographic copies, with explicit direction for self-instruction and teaching. Also rules for the proper use of capital letters and punctuation. That portion of the book devoted to letter writing embraces nearly 900 letters of correspondence in proper language and form including letters of business, introduction, apology, love, &c. Wedding and visiting cards of different styles. Notes of invitation to parties, dinners, &c. Marriage anniversaries, when celebrated, &c. A full and complete treatise on etiquette, which will be examined with interest. Also a dictionary of the language of flowers, and lastly yet, a dictionary of 11,000 synonymous words to enable the writer to express his ideas with ease and elegance. And then follows commercial and legal business forms, such as notes, bills, orders, checks drafts, agreements, bonds bills of sale, &c., with explanations, rates of interest, limitations of actions, and what property is exempt from levy and execution in each State and Territory, and other important matter of like character. Also the proper forms of resolutions, reports of committees and treasurers of societies, and parliamentary rules, &c., constituting in themselves an entire book. Then follow valuable statistical tables, choice poems, etc.

But we stop here and request our readers to examine the book for themselves, when it is presented, as the publishers will not allow it to be sold in any other manner but by subscription, and as Mr. Grable is now canvassing our country for it, we bespeak for him a favorable opportunity of presenting its merits, and cordially recommend this work to our readers, feeling confident that no one will regret the money paid for a copy, but will consider it one of his very best investments.

H. M. Thatcher gave us a "pop call" Monday returning the following day. He reports times flourishing in Lake with good prospects ahead. Stock buyers have commenced coming in and considerable stock will soon be taken below.

Both the Lakeview papers announce the arrival at that point of the senior editor of this paper, who is now on a "jamboree" in the "sage brush country." At this writing we are unadvised as to the precise day of his return.
