

FOR PRESIDENT, JAS. A. GARFIELD, Of Ohio. FOR VICE PRESIDENT, CHESTER A. ARTHUR, Of New York. PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS, GEO. B. CURRY, of Grant. E. L. APPELGATE, of Linn. C. B. WATSON, of Lake.

The Hancock hurrah died out very decidedly and very soon, and the Democrats are not as happy as they were.

A change of six votes would give the Republicans control of the United States Senate. This change will be made in 1881.

A soldier verging on his three-score cannot be turned into a statesman on a week's notice, even for the exigencies of the hour.

The Democratic party has been fasting for twenty years. Is the country prepared to assume the expense of filing such a cavity as the Democratic stomach must be?

It should be remembered that the Democrats ran a greater Union General than Hancock, Gen. McClellan, to utter defeat, because of the doctrines with which he was handicapped.

Hancock has no legitimate basis of strength. The people will conclude that there is a wide inconsistency in the dual character of Union soldier and Democratic candidate which is peculiar to say the least.

The Democrats cry aloud for a change at a time when the country is prosperous and stable. There can hardly be a change save for the worse, and the people are not stupid enough to invite that.

Senator Matt H. Carpenter says that the man who said that Wisconsin would not go for Garfield is the worst kind of a fool—that Garfield would not only carry the State, but he will do it by a largely increased majority.

This is the worst of all times in which to try the experiment of a figure-head President. It is a time of commercial and industrial activity, and a man who understands financial and industrial problems is the guide the country needs.

The Democratic platform favors tariff for revenue purposes only; and yet with control of both houses of Congress they have done nothing to modify the tariff they so unostentatiously denounce. Words are cheap. The test of their sincerity is the act.

The election of General Hancock, brave and soldierly though he is, with opinions unconfirmed by years of practical experience in political affairs, and surrounded and influenced as he must be by Democratic politicians, would be taking a leap in the dark.

Will some Democratic statesman now rise and point to a single act of the representatives of his party, since they obtained full control of Congress—to anything which they said or did, or refrained from saying or doing, either in extra or regular session, which gives any proof of their capacity to administer the Government with credit to themselves or safety to the country?

Judge Jere Black writes to the Philadelphia "Times" as follows: "Your expressed determination to see that General Garfield shall be defended against all unjust aspersions upon his personal character is equally pleasant reading to me, for I have been his devoted friend for many years, and I am resolved that I never will believe that he does not deserve the affection I have bestowed upon him. If he would carry the principles which regulate his private life into his public conduct, he would make the best chief magistrate we have ever had."

The Indianapolis "Journal" gives this bit of personal gossip respecting the Democratic candidate for Vice-President: "Mr. English's sleeping-room at his residence on the Circle, when he was President of the First National Bank, looked more like a prison than a room in a private residence in the heart of a populous city. The doors and windows were barred with iron, Mr. English locking himself in when he retired at night to prevent bank robbers from coming to his residence and carrying him off. He was particularly fearful during the strike of the working men in 1877, and always retired to his prison at an early hour, carefully locking himself in."

SQUARING THE YARDS.

The Republican party is not like the Democratic party—the two are as distinct in character as it is possible for two individuals to be. When Hancock was nominated every Democrat said it was just what he wanted, though nine out of every ten felt exactly the other way. When General Garfield was nominated seven-tenths of the Republican party had lost their first choice, and while they said there was no ground for objection they did not say it was just what they desired. But strong as they recognized duty they discussed the situation as thinking men. The result has been most remarkable.

We cannot remember a nomination made after the manner of that at Chicago that has grown upon public confidence so rapidly and so solidly as that of Gen. Garfield, and there can be no question of what is to come—it will be enthusiastic long before November. And it all comes from the character of the nominee himself. The more his remarkable career becomes known the more his services in public life are appreciated.

People have always complained that fit class statesmanship has never been able, when tried and known to reach the Presidency, and the examples of City, Webster, Benton and others appointed to as evidence. In the case of Garfield there can be no objection of this kind made. He has had eighteen years of experience, not alone in public life, but as a leader in the foremost position, and with questions demanding practical ability far above what was required by the gravest questions of thirty years ago. Not only has he shown aptitude of affairs, but his influence and abilities have been controlling and his powers original—directing rather than following. In short they find him a leader on the highest plane of national affairs.

It is this fact that is growing so rapidly on the country, and that has been intensified by his admirable and able letter of acceptance. There is no longer any hesitancy, but this has given way to eagerness, and the party is coming into fighting trim with a rapidity that tells of a victorious campaign. Carrying out the simile with which we began, the ship is wearing into positions, the yards are squared, the sails are set, and the vessel is ready to meet the battle that will end in a victory, the results of which will be memorable in their results. With Garfield's ability, solid character, devotion to the ideals of his party, and his wise conversation at the head of the government, there is sure promise of a bright and prosperous future.—Kansas City "Journal."

FLOPPING AND BLOWING.

Judging from the vigorous blowing and the brilliant headlines in the Roseburg "Star," Hancock is as good as already elected. A prodigious amount of noise is made over the accession to the Democratic ranks of Potter Palmer of Chicago and others, whose names it parades in its columns from week to week. We would advise our friend to keep an eye on Potter, as well as on a number of others that he mentions, as the flopping-over business is by no means a new thing with these gentlemen. The only danger that can possibly accrue to the Republican party from the action of these "prominent" is that they may take a notion to flop back before the campaign is fairly under way. Such headlines as "The German's rising en-masse in support of the soldier statesman," "The tidal wave sweeping from ocean to ocean," "The Grantites falling into line," remind one of an empty wagon rushing through the streets. Plenty of noise but no goods. Editors feeding the imagination on such barren assertions as the one about the Germans, will be apt to see "stars" before a great while. Unscrupulous campaigning don't pay.

It is well to refer sometimes to facts like these: Since the close of the war, the Republican party, through its administration, has paid off $87,104,823 of the national debt. And during the same time it has funded the remaining debt at lower rates of interest. Until this year the interest paid is $70,000,000 less than by the face of the bonds when issued. These are facts that are facts, and big ones at that, that nobody can get over or round.

A Democratic editor of the sanguine order, down in California, furnishes an article on the political outlook of the country. Besides the Solid South he claims for Hancock the States of Wisconsin, Maine, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Oregon and California, but winds up by saying: "It is too soon to confidently predict who will be President."

WAGON ROAD MEETING.

The wagon road meeting at the Court House last Saturday afternoon, called to hear the report of the committee appointed to meet at Waldo similar committees from Del Norte and Josephine counties, was largely attended by citizens from various parts of Jackson county. C. C. Beckman was called to the chair and E. D. Foudray acted as secretary.

A full report of the action of the meeting at Waldo was presented by Jerry Nunan. The plan adopted by the Waldo meeting for the construction of the proposed road was fully discussed and endorsed by this meeting, and a motion was made to ask the county authorities to raise Jackson county's proportion ($5,000) by taxation, provided that this can be done lawfully. It was resolved that the best legal advice be obtained to ascertain whether the county can levy a tax for this purpose; and it was further resolved that if the money cannot be raised in this manner, that it be raised by subscription.

The greatest confidence seemed to exist in the speedy completion of Crescent City. Every one in the Court House felt that the day was close at hand when our long isolation will be broken and a market afforded for our produce. Let the people of Jackson county take courage, put their shoulders to the wheel and assist in building this road, and our deliverance will not be long delayed. What is a bonus of $5,000? It is the nearest trifle, when it is remembered that $40,000 a year in freight is saved to Jackson county alone. And the character of the ground over which the new road passes is much better adapted for a thoroughfare than the character of the ground either on the road to Roseburg or Redding. Merchants should remember that goods delivered at Roseburg from San Francisco now cost them $25 a ton. The same amount of goods delivered at Crescent City from San Francisco will then cost them but $3.50 per ton. The advantages to Jackson county of the Crescent City wagon road are so palpable that all further argument is unnecessary. Read the proceedings of the Waldo meeting in another column.

The Treasury Department in an analysis of the principal of the public debt, issued July 15th, puts the population of the United States at 50,858,000, and the debt at $1,919,326,747.75. In this sum is included several hundred millions of circulating greenbacks. The debt per capita is $37.74. The national debt was greatest in 1865, when it was two billions and nearly eight hundred millions of dollars, or $78.25 per capita. These burdens were entailed upon the American people, by the politicians of the South in an effort to destroy the government of the Union and establish upon its ruins a multitude of governments. The same men who in 1861-2 and 3 maneuvered to take the Southern States out of the Union are now trying, through the disguise of the Democratic party, to obtain control of the general government. As long as the Confederate wing of the party shall rule the Democracy, as it now does, that long will it be unsafe for the American people to entrust the affairs of the government into their hands.

We hear that George Isaac on Butte creek, had a team to become unmanageable for him last Friday whilst engaged loading hay. The amount of damage done, if any, our reporter failed to inform our localist. It is to be hoped that it is not serious.
