If he would now consent to a fair election in his State, do away with tissue ballots, and many other disreputable Southern electioneering practices of which he is the father, and allow the black and white Republicans to vote their sentiments untrammelled by the Democratic mob, the public would be less suspicious of bim.

The Chicago "Inter-Ocean" save: "In the army and in Congress Garfield was the soldier's friend in every sense. His career as a soldier was of the kind to excite the enthusiasm of volunteers, and his work in Congress has made him more friends among the officers and soldiers of the regular army, or among those who have been in the regular aware of. Since Garfield's nomination not a single army officer has spoken of has many more warm friends among these non partisans than General Hancock."

What the country has to fear in the Democratic party, according to the independent Boston "Herald," is its lack of statesmanship. No doubt this is one of the things. The party has two or three statesmen in Congress, but they are left without influence. Two or three men like Bayard and Kernan can make no head against the dozens of men like Voorhees and Vest and Hill and Morgan."
