East Portland, to her larger sister, what Brooklyn is to New York, lies across the Willamette and is most beautifully situated, perhaps where Portland should have been, and is growing rapidly. A bridge spanning the river will soon connect the two cities, work having already commenced. A way to the eastward stretches miles of forest where the echo of the settler's ax is yet unheard but which in good time will glow with a golden harvest. Far beyond all old "Hood" looks down silently from the clouds, like a sentinel watching this surging wave of progress that has crystallized on the shore of the Willamette ere it could reach the sea and seems to say "all well."

This issue closes the twenty-fifth volume of the SENTINEL and we must be pardoned if we briefly glance at its career. For just a quarter of a century it has stood guard for the people of Southern Oregon in sunshine and storm, never finching nor wavering in its duty. Through various changes of proprietors, none of whom have been requited for their labor, its course has been steady and uniform in support of right and opposition to wrong. It has never waited for public opinion, nor catered to it; but has been outspoken and fearless in its opinions, aiming to do right rather than seeking popularity, and it is needless to say to the public that under its present management it will so continue.

There was an era in Oregon journalism when editorial ethics were not observed and the amenities of the editorial profession less pleasant than now, and when hard blows were to be given this journal was ever in the front. That time has passed, however, and will never return. Through all the changes of society, through financial vicissitudes the SENTINEL has struggled and our patrons are assured that no pains or labor will be spared to make the twenty-sixth volume better than any that have preceded it. It will always be found defending the interests of the public and as heretofore will always advocate Republican principles as long as we think them right, avoiding all offence and always regarding the right of opinion in others. Thanking the public for a support which has been voluntary we close our quarter century of service by wishing all a Happy New Year.

It takes four men in Linkville to watch a corpse at $2.50 apiece. Corpses in Lake county must be as lively as that of the Democratic party and seem to need as much watching.

NOTICE.
LAND OFFICE AT ROSEBURG, OGN., Dec. 13, 1880.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and secure final entry thereof on Saturday, January 29, 1881, before the Judge or Clerk of the Court of Jackson county, Oregon, viz.: Isaac P. Stinson, Homestead Application, No. 2333, for the S 1/4 of N W 1/4, Sec. 3, S E 1/4 of N E 1/4, and N E 1/4 of S E 1/4, Sec. 4, T. 37, S. of R. 1 W., and names the following as his witnesses, viz: James Beck, Robt. Mavly, John McVey and John W. Smith, all of Manzanita, Jackson County Oregon.
Wm. F. BENJAMIN, Register.

Jackson county is well represented in the metropolis. Judge Tolman occupies the U. S. Surveyor General's office, putting on neither unbecoming style nor airs over his country friends but attending to the duties of his office in the same quiet way that he carried on his farm and giving full satisfaction to the department. Ed. F. Lewis, once foreman of the SENTINEL is the chief clerk, and an excellent one, just as much at home as in a prospecting hole or at the printers' case and far more comfortable. He is the same in Laskyon county, no maps of survey having been filed by the railroad company; and, consequently, the land never having been withdrawn from the operation of the homestead and pre-emption laws, titles may be obtained on any portion of the six million acres referred to. The grant is the same in Oregon as in California and, of our knowledge, we know that homestead and pre-emption titles are being continually perfected and that lands are still sold at the minimum rate of $1.25 per acre, without reference to the even or odd numbered sections. The forfeit of the grant, therefore, will add nothing to the public domain, nor increase its value, for as yet nothing has been taken from it by the grant and the portion of the domain lying along the proposed line will be absolutely worthless until a railroad is built through it. Some greedy people, thinking the road was to be pushed through to at once when it was commenced and fearing that the companies would be too rich secured lands along this line and to-day they curse those who first spoke of a railroad as they are being impoverished by paying taxes on lands that only promised speculative returns. The Journal thinks the company can be "compelled" to build the road by taking away the grant. We cannot agree in this opinion either. Neither individuals nor corporations can be "compelled" to invest capital without promise of fair profit and as neither the government nor the settler will be benefited by the forfeiture, it would seem wiser to still offer an inducement to a company to build than to destroy all hope and benefit no one. The Journal further observes:

"We have no doubt a railroad will be built through Northern California and Southern Oregon, at some distant day, but its construction will depend upon the local growth of the population and business of the sections concerned, rather than the business of the terminal points."

Now, if the inducement, in the shape of a grant of land of no earthly value, until made accessible by a railroad, is taken away, then we have every doubt that a road will ever be built to connect Redding and Roseburg. The frozen truth is that the resources of the territory between these points never will or can justify the building of a road and the meagre extent of "local business would hardly grease the wheels of a train running through our territory. If, however, Mr. Berry's plan of "compelling" the construction of this very desirable road, by taking away all inducements to build it, can be made successful, we will not say "nay."

Much unopinioned humor is to be found in the menace lately sent to Lord Morris Fitzgerald by his Irish tenants, to the effect that, though he would be certainly shot, nothing would be done to frighten or annoy Lady Adels, his wife. Of course a wife would not be annoyed by the shooting of her husband; at least that is the Irish view of it.

The Lake county Examiner thinks that the land grant of the Oregon Central military Road Co. is a steal. We came to that conclusion long ago and opposed the issuance of lieu scrip to the company with good effect. Special agent Prosser should examine that pretended road and report on it also.

They will never get to the North pole until it is announced that the Government will establish it into a new and independent Congressional district. Then look out for the rash. There are plenty of Ohio men who would go a-foot and climb the "pole" feet foremost for the sake of a chance.

Garfield is Our Next President.
The Jacksonville New York Store received last Saturday some $3,000 worth of goods which were damaged on the road between Roseburg and Jacksonville. He offers these goods for sale at half their cost for cash. Call and be convinced.
