A HEADLIGHT IN VIEW.

"Yes," said the conductor, biting off the tip of a cigar and slowly scratching a match on his leg, "I've seen a good deal of railroad life that's interesting and exciting in the twenty years that I've been twisting brakes and slamming doors for a living.

"I've seen all kinds of sorrow and all kinds of joy—seen the happy bridal couple starting out on their bridal tour with the bright and hopeful future before them, and the black-robed mourner on her way to a new-made grave, wherein she must bury the idol of her lonely old heart.

"Wealth and pinching poverty ride on the same train, and the merry laugh of the joyous, healthy child is mingled with the despairing sigh of the aged. The great antipodes of life are familiar to the conductor, for every day the extremes of the world are meeting beneath this eye.

"I've mutilated the ticket of many a blackleg, and handled the passes of all our most eminent headhunts. I don't know what walk of life is more crowded with thrilling incidents than mine."

"Ever have any smashups?"
"Smashups! Oh, yes, several of them; none, however, that couldn't have been a good deal worse.

"There is one incident in my railroad life," continued the conductor, running his tongue carefully over a broken place in the wrapper of his cigar, "that I never spoke of before to any one. It has caused me more misery and wretchedness than any one thing that ever happened to me in my official career.

"Sometimes, even now, after the lapse of many years, I awake in the night with the cold drops of agony standing on my face and the horrible surroundings upon me with its terrible surroundings, as plain as on the memorable night it occurred.

"I was running extra on the Union Pacific for a conductor who was an old friend of mine, and who had gone south on a vacation for his health.

"At about 7:30, as near as I can remember, we were sailing along all comfortable one evening with a straight stretch of track ahead for ten or fifteen miles, running on time and everybody feeling tipsy, as overland travelers do who get acquainted with each other and feel congenial. All at once the train suddenly slowed down, ran in on an old siding, and stopped.

"Of course I got out and ran ahead to the engine to see what the matter was. Old Antifat, the engineer, had got down and was on the main track looking ahead to where, twinkling along six or seven miles down the road, apparently was the headlight of an approaching train. It was evidently 'wild,' for nothing was due that we knew of at that hour.

"However, we had been almost miraculously saved from a frightful wreck by the engineer's watchfulness, and everybody went forward and shook Old Antifat by the hand and cried and thanked him till it was the most affecting scene for a while that I ever witnessed. It was as though we had stopped upon the very verge of a bottomless chasm, and everybody was laughing and crying at once, till it was a kind of a cross between a revival and a picnic.

"After we had waited about a half an hour, I should say, for the blasted train to come up and pass us, and apparently she was no nearer, a cold clammy suspicion began to bore itself into the adamant shell of my intellect. The more I thought of it, the more unhappy I felt. I almost wished that I was dead. Cold streaks ran up my back followed by hot ones. I wanted to go home. I wanted to be where the hungry, prying eyes of the great, throbbing work day world could not see me.

"I called Antifat one side and said something to him. He swore softly to himself and kicked the ground, and looked at the headlight still glimmering in the distance. Then he got on his engine, and I yelled, 'All aboard!' In a few moments we were moving again, and the general impression was that the train ahead was sidetracked and waiting for us, although there wasn't a sidetrack within twenty miles, except the one we had just left.

"It was never exactly clear to the passengers where we passed that wild train, but I didn't explain it to them. I was too much engrossed with my sarghing thought.

AN INTERESTING INVALID.

The Nachrichten of Basle adds a new anecdote to the rich collection of German stork-tales. During one of the great storms of the present year, the lightning struck a barn in the village of Lowenburg, and a stork's nest—in which there were some young storks—was threatened by the flames. The two parent birds contemplated the horrible situation from a distance, with evident distress. At last the mother-bird darted down upon the nest, and, seizing one of her young family with her beak, bore it off to a safe spot upon a meadow. The father followed her, and settled down to keep watch over his offspring. When the mother returned to the scene of danger the fire had reached the nest, in which one bird still remained; but while she was flying round it preparing for a descent, the young one fell through the charred nest into the burning barn. It was no moment for thought. Down darted the mother into the smoke and fire, and coming up with her sprouting in her beak, flew off, apparently unhurt.

On the next day a wounded stork fell to the ground in the market place of the neighboring town of Trebbia. She was unable to stand, and the police of the little town carried her into the guard house, where it was discovered that both her legs were sadly burned, and she was recognized as the heroic mother who had done the brave feat of rescue at the fire in Lowenburg. A physician was sent for, and the burgo-master found her a temporary hospital in the Rathaus. Meanwhile, the spouse of the sick she-stork had discovered her whereabouts. He attended diligently to the two young ones, and paid daily visits to the mother, as if to inform himself how the patient was getting on, and to assure her that their children were doing well. The school children of Trebbia readily charged themselves with the task of finding food for the patient, bringing her every day far more than the necessary number of living frogs. The burgo-master paid an official visit every day to the sick guest of municipality, to see that the doctor's orders were duly carried out, and in less than a fortnight the bird was sufficiently hale to fly away to her husband and children.—[London Globe.

A Boy's Composition on Girls.

Girls are the most unaccountable things in the world—except women. Like the wicked fleas, when you have them they ain't there. I can cipher clean over to proper fractions, and the teacher says I do it first rate, but I can't cipher out a girl proper or improper, and you can't either. The only rule in arithmetic that suits their case is the double rule of two. They are as full of Old Nick as their skins can hold, and they'll die if they couldn't torment somebody. When they try to be mean they are as mean as parsley, though they ain't as mean as they let on to be, except sometimes, and then they are a great deal meaner. The only way to get along with a girl when she comes with her nonsense is to give her tit for tat, and that will dumuxx her; when you get a girl dumuxxed as is as nice as a new pie. A girl can sow more wild oats in a day than a boy can in a year, but girls get their wild oats sowed after a while, which boys never do, and then they settle down as calm and placid as a mud-puddle. But I like girls first rate, and guess all boys do. I don't care how many tricks they play on me—and they don't care either. The hoity-toitist girls in the world can't boil over like a glass of soda water. By-and-by they will get into the traces with somebody they like, and pull as steady as an old stage horse. That's the beauty of them. So let 'em wave, I say; they will pay for it some day, sewing on buttons, and trying to make a decent man of the fellow they spliced onto; and ten chances to one if they don't get the worst of it.

Gen. Weaver in a debate in the House of Representatives, said Alabama gave 92,000 Democratic majority, with seven counties "to bear from," and there are not 75,000 Democratic voters in Alabama. He also said the Democratic majority could not reach 92,000 if there had not been a single vote in opposition. Weaver was down there, and knows all about the free ballot and fair count in Dixie.

AMENDED ASSESSMENT LAW.

We give below the full text of the amended assessment law, passed at the last session of the legislature:

SECTION 1. Section 16 of title 3 of chapter 57 of the miscellaneous laws of Oregon, relating to the assessment of property and the levy and collection of taxes, shall be amended so as to be read as follows:

Sec. 16. The assessor, after qualifying as prescribed by law, shall immediately procure from the county clerk a blank assessment roll and forthwith proceed and assess all taxable property within his county, and shall return to such county clerk on or before the first Monday in September next following such assessment roll, with a full and complete assessment of such taxable property entered thereon, including a full and precise description of the lands or lots so owned by each person therein named, which description shall correspond with the plan or plot of any town laid out or recorded, and said land or town lots shall be valued at their true cash value, taking into consideration the improvements on the land, and in the surrounding country, the quality of soil, its convenience to transportation lines, public roads, mills and other advantages. True cash value shall be held and taken to mean the amount such property would sell for at a voluntary sale made in the ordinary course of business, and not what it would bring at public auction or forced sale. The county clerk or any county may, if necessary, by order made before the first Monday in September, extend the time for returning the assessment roll until the first Monday in October following. It shall be the duty of the assessor to deduct the amount of indebtedness, within the state, of any person assessed, from the amount of his or her taxable property, but no indebtedness shall in any case be deducted unless it is bona fide indebtedness due from the person assessed as principal debtor, and not on any account of any contingent liability, as surety, endorser or otherwise, and in case two or more parties as principal debtors are jointly or severally liable for the payment of any such indebtedness, neither of them shall be entitled to the deduction of any portion of it than the proportion each debtor bears to the whole number of such debtors, to the effect that only the amount of indebtedness shall be deducted in favor of all such debtors, nor shall a deduction be made in favor of any person assessed unless he or she delivers to the assessor a written statement, duly sworn to, specifying the name and residence of the creditor, the nature of the debt, the names of parties, if any, who are liable therefor, and which statement shall show that the debt, or portion thereof, ought to be deducted, has not been deducted in any other county or place in the state from the assessment of such person for that year; and in case such statement shall be found to be false to the knowledge of the party who made it, or that such party has willfully or recklessly made a false statement in such case for the purpose of obtaining a deduction of indebtedness, such party shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be liable to the pains and penalties therefor.

Approved October 25, 1880.
