

Law of Newspapers.

Subscribers who do not give explicit notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

1. If subscribers refuse the discontinuance of a newspaper, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.
2. If subscribers neglect to take their newspapers from the office to which they are directed, the law holds them responsible until they have notified the publisher, and the publisher is not liable for the same.
3. If subscribers remove to other places without notifying the publisher, and the newspapers are sent to the former address, they are not responsible for the same.
4. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers from the office, or sending and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of discontinuance.
5. The publisher who neglects to give legal notice of the neglect of a person to take from the office a newspaper addressed to him, is liable to the publisher for the subscription price.

A CENTURY BEHIND.

To be a hundred years ahead of time argues newspaper enterprise. This feat was accomplished by the Boston Daily Globe on New Year's day, when an impression for January 1, 1881, was sent out to all its patrons. The changes of a century as dissolved by the current news of the day were starting. The house of Delegates of the Irish Republic after a brilliant debate in which reference was made to the land agitation of 1880, had passed a resolution voting $5,000,000 in aid of 3,000,000 English tenant farmers. The proceedings of Congress related to the appointment of a chief of planetary signal bureau with headquarters at the equatorial station on Mars, repeal of the expatriation act growing out of the imperial insurrection of 1920, and a subsidy to flying machines carrying the mails between Boston and Liverpool and between Havana and Ura Major, and were participated in by delegates from Cuba, Canada and Australia. The review of the year showed that there were already 139 States in the Union, and that if the applications of Brazil, Chili and Peru for admission should be favorably acted upon, the Nation would contain 1,000,000,000 inhabitants. Among the "social sensations" were a collision in mid-air between aerial cars on the London and Boston route, the success of the new play "Hyer Evolution, or the Physical Basis of Life," and the invention of a press with a capacity for printing 300,000 newspapers an hour. Every column bristled with extraordinary intelligence, such as the beginning of a new ment to save the Old New Old South by means of aerial excursions from the South Sea Republic and popular exhibitions of the visigraph; the message of the President of Greece favoring annexation to the United States; the leveling of the Rocky mountains, the filling up of the Gulf of Mexico by a Key West dam, the De Lesseps Canal being used as a heat reservoir; an excursion of Harvard students to the Pyramids; a trip through the crater of Vesuvius made by a party clad in asbestos suits; a trotting match for horses that had never beaten 130, etc. etc. It is obvious that this copy of the Globe will be of great interest a hundred years from now. All parents and guardians having under their charge promising infants, who are likely to live to see the true date of issue, should send for a copy and file it away to await the centennial.—[New York Tribune.

A Successful Picture.

Every now and then the City Council is petitioned to declare some unfortunate a "common drunkard" after an ordinance which forbids any one to sell or give to such persons alcoholic drinks under penalty. It is a sorrowful picture when a man sinks so low in his own esteem and in the esteem of his fellow citizens as to call for such legislation in his behalf. Here is the case of a man who once stood high as a citizen, with a reputation as a mechanic gained by some, blessed in a loving wife and children to make his home happy, becoming addicted to the flowing bowl, and by degrees growing worse and worse, till at length it might be truthfully said of him that he "never drew a sober breath." His family were at length estranged, friends and family deserted him, and now, in his old age, with a body all saturated with poison, diseased in mind and body, the law steps in and forbids that he shall even enjoy the one poor pleasure that is left to him of all the good things of life—the pleasure of pouring down his parched throat the poison that robs him of reason and places him below the brutes! If it is right now for the law to step in and deprive him of drink, why in God's name can't the law step in and save men before they have reached such degradation!—Albany Register.

"Above all things in this world," said a youth who stands on the street corners for a living, "do I value the love of my dear mother." "God bless you, young man, for those noble sentiments," said a missionary. "Having so much respect for a mother, you need no other recommendation to successful men, who will aid you." "Yes," continued the young man, "another feeds me, clothes me, does my washing, and has been doing it for twenty-five years. I don't know what I should do without her."
