Law of Newspapers.

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

1. If any subscribers order the discontinuance of their newspapers, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

2. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their newspapers from the offices to which they are directed, the law holds them responsible until they have settled the bills, and ordered them discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publisher, and the newspapers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers from this office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

6. The postmaster who neglects to give legal notice of the neglect of a person to take from the office a newspaper addressed to him, is liable to the publisher for the subscription price.

MOUNT SHASTA.

The noblest mountain in the United States is Shasta. It is said that Whitney is higher, but Whitney has for its base the Sierra Nevadas, and the peaks around it dwarf its own tremendous hight. But Shasta rises from the plain a single mountain, and while all the year around the lambs gambol at its base, its crown is the eternal snow. In the hot summer days, as the farmers at Shasta's base gather their crops, they can see where the wild wind heaps the snow drifts about his crest. The mountain is one of winter's stations, and from his forts of snow upon its top he never withdraws his garrison. There are the bastions of ice, the frosty towers; there his old bugler, the wind, is daily sounding the advance and the retreat of the storm. The mountain holds all latitudes and all seasons at the same time in its grasp. Flowers bloom at its base, farther up the forest trees wave their ample arms; further still the brown of autum is upon the mountain slopes, and over all hangs the eternal winter. Standing close to the mountain's base, the human eye and mind fails to grasp the immensity of the mountain. But as one from a distance looks back upon it, he discovers how magnificent is the hight. For days will the mountain fold the mist about its crest like a veil, and remain hidden from mortal sight, and then suddenly, as if in deference to a rising or setting sun, will roll back the vapors, and the watcher in the valley below will behold gems of topaz and of ruby made of sunbeams set in the diadem of white, and toward the sentinel mountain from a hundred miles around men will turn their eyes in admiration. Thus it frowns and smiles alternately through the year; it hails the incoming and outgoing centuries, changeless amid the mutations of ages; forever austere, forever cold and pure. Of all American mountains it has the most sovereign look; it leans on no other hight; it associates with no other mountain; it builds its own pedestal in the valley and never doffs its icy crown. The savage, in the long ago, with awe and trembling, strained his eyes to the hight, and his clouded imagination pictured it as the throne of a deity, whence issued the snow, the frost and the wild wind from their brewing place on the mountain's top. The white man with equal awe strains his eyes upward to where the sunlight paints with purple and gold the mimic glaciers of the butte, and is not much wiser than was the untutored savage in trying to comprehend how and why the mighty mass was upreared. It is a glory in itself. It seizes the clouds with icy arms and compresses them until their contents are dropped upon the thirsty fields below; from its base the Sacramento starts on its way to the ocean; despite its frowns, it is a merciful agent to mankind, and on the minds of those who see it in all its power and splendor, a picture is painted which will last as long as the gift to admire anything magnificent is left.—Pacific Rural Press.

ART.—Last week we were shown a fine specimen of art, in the shape of an "East View of the Giant's Causeway," county Antrim, Ireland, done in needle work, the stitches being exact and pretty imitations of line engravings. The picture is complete in every particular, and the thread is so placed as to represent outlines of basaltic columns, horizon, with ship in distance, and a party of ladies and gentlemen in the foreground. The effects are produced in cotton and silk, on a back composed of Irish linen. It is the handiwork of Mrs. Anne Ward, mother of Mrs. J. M. Tiernan, of this city. Aside from the artistic finish of the picture itself, the frame is quite historic, being manufactured from a rafter of one of the old churches erected soon after the Normans had conquered the Celts and taken the island into their possession. This work of art has been exhibited in the world's exhibitions of Paris, Vienna, London and New York, and received a prize medal from each. Mrs. Tiernan informed us that she was offered £5,000 for it, but refused to part with this memento. It was considered worthy of notice in the "The World's Exhibitor," with an illustration, a work published in London descriptive of the exhibition. Mrs. Tiernan has several other gems of art, done in the same style, by her mother, which she praizes very highly, among which is an exact likeness of herself, worked on Irish linen, with Irish thread and by Irish hands. —Dalles Times.

THE VILLARD COMBINATION.—A Chicago telegram of May 14th says: The Inter-Ocean's New York special of May 13th says: The control of the Northern Pacific Railroad by the Villard combination appears to have been accomplished. An agreement has been made by which Mr. Villard buys the Northern Pacific stock of President Billings amounting to about $800,000, and consents to a discontinuance of suits brought against the company to annul its recent issue of $18,000,000 in stock. On the other hand Mr. Villard is to have a majority of the seats in the Board of Directors. Whether the agreement was signed or not to-day was not made public, but it is said that there is no doubt that it would be carried out, as it was satisfactory.

When you havn't got dogs, bees will serve your turn. A Prussian innkeeper being assaulted by some drunken customers, seized a hive of bees and flung it into the crowd. The insects got in their work at once. One man was just smashing a mirror, and dropped the hatchet to lay hold of his nose and ears. The crowd have brought suit for damages against the inn-keeper. The question will probably be, whether bees are wild beasts or domestic animals.

The Woman's Christian Union of of Brooklyn have resolved in the fall to begin a vigorous anti-polygamy campaign, by exciting the sympathy of all Christians. They intend to start a movement in opposition to the admission of Utah as a State. They are assured of much sympathy.
