Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

1. If any subscriber orders the discontinuance of his subscription, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.

2. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their newspapers from the office to which they are directed, the law holds them responsible until they are notified by the publisher, and the newspapers are sent to the proper direction, they are held responsible.

A GEORGIA SERMON.

A Baptist Brother's Opinion About the Presbyterians.

A lady correspondent of the Independent gives a sketch of a sermon she heard in Georgia nearly half a century ago, from which we give an extract:

The preacher was apparently about fifty years of age, large, muscular and well proportioned. On entering the pulpit he took off his coat and hung it on a nail behind him; then opened his collar and wrist-bands, and wiped the perspiration from his face, neck and hands. He was clad in striped cotton homespun, and his shirt was of the same material. He had travelled several miles that morning, and seemed almost overcome by the heat. But the brethren sang a couple of hymns while he was fanning and cooling off, and when he rose he looked comfortable and good-natured.

He had preached there once or twice before, but to most of the audience he was a stranger. Hence he thought it necessary to announce himself, which he did as "Old Club Ax Davis, from Sarven county, a half hard and half soft shell Baptist."

"I have given myself that name," said he, because I believe the Lord elected me from all eternity, to go ahead in the backwoods and grub out a path and blaze the way for other sinners to follow. After the thickest of it is cut away, a good warm Methodist brother will come along and take my trail and make things a little smoother and a good deal wiser. And after all the underbrush is cleared out, and the owls and wolves are skinned back, and rattlesnakes are killed off, a Presbyterian brother, in black broadcloth and white cravat will come along and cry for decency and order. And they'll both do good in their sphere. I don't despise a larnt man, even if he don't dress and think as I do. You couldn't pay me enough to wear broadcloth Summer nor Winter, and you couldn't pay a Presbyterian brother enough to do without it in dog day.

"God don't make us all alike, my brethren, but every man has his own sphere. When God has a place to fill He makes a man and puts him in it. When He wanted General Jackson He made him and set him to fightin' in the South, and the English; when He wanted George Whitfield He made him for to blow the gospel trumpet as no other man ever blowed it, and when He wanted old Club Ax Davis He made him and set him to grubbin' in the backwoods.

"But my shell isn't so hard but I can see good points in everybody; and as for the Presbyterians, they are a long way ahead of us Baptists and Methodists in some things. They raise their children better than anybody on the face of the earth. Only a few days ago a Methodist class leader said to me: 'Brother Club-Ax, I was born a Methodist, I was raised a Methodist, and by the grace of God I hope to die a Methodist; but, thank God, I got a Presbyterian wife to raise my children.'

"And I believe, my brethren, if the Lord should open the way for me to marry again, I'd try my best to find a Presbyterian woman, and run my chances of breakin' her into the savin' doctrines of feet washin' and immersin' on afterwards."

Just at this point he was interrupted by two spotted hounds that had been continually running up and down the pulpit stairs. One of them jumped upon the seat and began to gnaw his coat tail, in which was something he had brought along for his lunch.

He turned slowly around and took him by the ears and tail and threw him out the window as easily as if it had been a young kitten. The other took warning and got out as rapidly as possible, though not without howling and yelping as if it had been half-killed.

He then turned to the audience and said, smiling, "St. Paul exhorted the brethren to 'beware of dogs.' I wonder what he would do if he were in my place this morning! It appears like I am compassed about with dogs, as David says he was."

He had scarcely commenced preaching again before there was a squealing and kicking among the mules and horses that were tied to trees close by. He put his head out of the window and said, "no harm done, my brethren. Just a creature with a side-saddle on has broken loose. Will some brother head the animal for no sister can walk home this hot day."

Quiet being restored, he continued: "Well, my brethren, I will now try to say what I allowed to about the Presbyterians. As I said before, they raise their children a heap better than we do. They believe better in church and keep Sunday better, and read the Bible, and learn the catechism better than ours do. I declare, my brethren, their children are larnt that Westminster catechism by the time they begin to talk plain.

"It ain't three weeks since I was out cattle huntin'—for two of my yearlings had strayed off—and I stopped in at old Brother Hardey's on Rund creek, and took dinner. He is a deacon in the Presbyterian Church over thar. Well, as shure as I stand here, my brethren, Sister Hardey had her little gal a stanin' right before her, with toes just even with the crack of the floor, and her hands were a hangin' down by her side, and her mouth turned up like a chicken when it drinks, and she was putting this question to her out o' that catechism:

"What are the benefits which in this life do either accompany or flow from justification, adoption and sanctification?"

"Now, the question itself was enough to break the child down. But when she began to say that question all over (for that's the way it was in the book), and then hitch the answer to it, and which, all put together, made this: 'The benefits which in this life do either accompany or flow from justification are peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, increase of grace and perseverance therein to the end.' I thought the child was the greatest wonder I had ever seen in all my life. She tucked it right through, too, without balkin' or missin' the first word. And she spoke so sweet, and she looked so like a little angel, that before I knowed it, the tears was a runnin' down my cheek as big as buckshot. I've seen the day when I could have mauld and split a thousand rails quicker and easier than I could larnt that thing and said it off like she did.

"Now, my brethren, that child didn't understand or know the meanin' of one word o' that. It put me up to all I knew to take it in myself. But just let that Presbyterian young'un grow up, and every word of that catechism will come back to her, and her character will stiffen up under it, and she'll have the backbone of the matter in her for life.

"Now, I can't put things into my children that way. Nothing don't stay, somehow. It's like drivin' a nail into a rotten log."

"Now, my mother and father were good Baptists and raised their children to be honest and industrious, but I never heard one of them pray in my life, and I was most grown man before I ever prayed a prayer myself, and it was on this wise:

"There was a big meetin' over in Elbert county, and I knowed a pretty gal over there that I wanted to go and see. So I borrowed a little Jersey wagon, which was a stylish thing in them days, and went over to her home and stayed all night, and engaged her to ride to meetin' next day, which was Sunday.

This last remark I never forgot. For thirty years afterwards, as I would stand at the black-board trying to fix rules and principles in the mind of a dull pupil, this remark would come back to me with its peculiar pertinacity.

"I tell you, my brethren," he concluded, "if our children had a little more catechism and the Presbyterians a little less, it would be better for both.

"Then, we don't pray in our families like they do. I know their prayers are mighty long, and they pray all over creation; but after all, it's the right way. It's better than prayin' too little.

"We went and had a glorious time, and I might as well say right here that she was afterward my wife, but a comin' home I met with a powerful accident that I've never got over to this day. As I was a comin' down a steep hill, some part of the gearin' give way and let me and the wagon on my creetur's heels; and bein' young and skeery and not much used to wheels, she rattled and kicked and tore from one side of the road to the other until I was pitched headforemost as much as ten foot into a deep gully, and it's a miracle of mercy that my neck wasn't broke on the spot.

"Expectin' to be killed every minit, I thought I ought to ask the Lord for mercy. But as I had never prayed in my life, I couldn't think of the blessin' my father used to say before eatin' when we had company, and which was this: 'Lord make us thankful for what we are about to receive.'"

"Now my brethren, do you s'pose any Presbyterian-raised boy was ever put to such a strait as that for prayer! No. He would have prayed for himself and gone off after the Jews and the heathens whilst I was a huntin' up and gettin' off that blessin'."

He has a Record of 2:35.

Pedigree: Ophir was sired by the celebrated trotting stallion Kentucky Hunter, he by Broken Leg Hunter, of New York; grand-sire, Sorrel Hunter; great grand-sire, Old Kentucky Hunter; great grand-sire, Highlander; Sorrel Hunter's dam was a broodmare mare, was sired by the trotting Stallion Harden Hunter; grand-sire, Sorrel Hunter; great grand-sire, Old Kentucky Hunter; great grand-sire, Highlander. This is a correct pedigree of Kentucky Hunter, and makes him about seven-eighths Hunter, or perhaps better known as Messenger blood, and which has been thoroughly proven to be the fastest and best stock ever introduced into the United States. Ophir's dam was sired by David Hill; her dam was sired by Prince Albert, a Messenger owned by William Reynolds, of Colusa county, California. Ophir's dam is now owned in Santa Clara county by Dr. C. L. French; her dam is owned by D. M. Reavis, of Butte county. They are both fine, large and splendid roadsters.

Pedigree of Ophir's dam's sire: David Hill was sired by Black Lion; he by David Hill's celebrated trotting stallion, Black Hawk, he by Sherman Morgan; he by Justin Morgan, and he by True Briton, who was imported from England and used by General DeLancey as a charger on Long Island in 1777. David Hill's dam was got by Hambletonian; he by Abdallah; he by Old Hambrino, and he by imported Messenger. The dam of Hambletonian was Charles Kent's mare by imported Bedford.
