SOUTHEASTERN OREGON. As Klamath Lake borders on this county, and the fountain head of Klamath river, which flows through this county, we give the following description from the last number of the "West Shore," in reference to this lake and the flourishing town of Linkville, at the lower end of Big Klamath Lake: The Klamath basin lies at the eastern base of the Cascade range, in 50 or 60 miles from north to south, and from 10 to 20 miles wide. A range of high hills divides the basin into two parts at the lowest end of Big Klamath lake. The upper or big lake is from 30 to 35 miles long and from 5 to 20 wide. It is a beautiful sheet of water and it is literally alive with the most delicious lake trout and other fish. It pours its waters into Little Klamath or lower basin through Link river. This is a remarkable river, it begins at the lower end of the Big lake, a stream 300 feet wide, smooth, tranquil and silent, in a few rods it begins to dash and foam and splash and rear and speed away in a wild mad race for the short space of one and a half miles, and then after its short and turbid first pours its angry waters into the placid basin of Little Klamath lake and is again at rest. In its short and eventful course it descends in rapids and falls a perpendicular distance, variously estimated at from 60 to 75 feet, affording an excellent water power as may be found anywhere in the world. Being the outlet of a large lake, the even tenor of its flow is never disturbed by flood. A bridge spans the river just above where it empties into the lower basin. Linkville, at one time the county seat of Lake county, is situated on the river just east of the bridge and extends for some distance along the lake shore. All the cereals do well here, especially wheat and rye.—"Yreka Journal."

PIONEERS' RE-UNION.—Yesterday dawned clear and pleasant for the Pioneers, and by ten o'clock the streets of Ashland were filled with visitors from all sections of the county, as well as from adjacent counties in Oregon and California. On all hands were heard hearty greetings, and the day seemed one of pleasure to the pioneers and their families and friends.

THE TRUE TALE OF WILLIAM TELL. William Tell had a hay ranch near Bergelen about five hundred and eighty years ago. Tell had lived in the mountains all his life, and shot chamois and chipmunks with a cross-gun till he was a bad man to stir up. At that time Switzerland was run principally by a lot of carpet-baggers from Austria; and Tell got down on them about the year 1307. It seems that Tell wanted the government contract to furnish hay at $45 a ton for the year 1306, and Gessler, who was controlling the patronage of Switzerland, let the contract to an Austrian who had a big lot of condemned hay further up the gulch. One day Gessler put his plug hat on a telegraph pole, and issued order 236, regular series, to the effect that every annozer passing down the toll-road should bow to it. Gessler happened to be in behind the brush when Tell went by, and he noticed that Bill said "shoot the hat," and did not salute it; so he told his men to gather Mr. Tell in, and put him in the refrigerator. Gessler told him that if he would shoot a crab-apple from the head of his only son, at two hundred yards, with a cross-gun, he would give him his liberty. Tell consented, and knocked the apple higher than Gilroy's kite. Old Gessler, however, noticed another sticking in William's girdle, and he asked what kind of a flowery break that was. Tell told him that if he had killed the kid instead of busting the apple, he intended to drill a hole through the stomach of Mr. Gessler. This made Gessler mad again, and he took Tell on a picnic up the river in irons. Tell jumped off when he had a good chance, and cut across a bend in the river, and when the picnic party came down he shot Gessler dead with a mackler. This opened the ball for freedom, and weakened the Austrian government so much that in the following November they elected Tell to fill the long term, and a half freed for the short term. After that Tell was recognized by the ruling power, and he could get almost any contract that he wanted. He got the service on the stage line up into the Alps increased to a daily, and had the contracts in the name of his son Albert. The appropriation was increased to $150,000 a year, and he had a good thing. Tell lived many years after this, and was loved by the Swiss people because he had freed their land. Whenever he felt lonesome he would take his cross-gun and go out and kill a tyrant. He had tyrant and toast almost every day till Switzerland was free, and the peasants blessed him for their deliverer. When Tell got to be an old man he would go out into the mountains and apostrophize them in these memorable words: Ye crags and peaks, I'm with you once again. I hold to you the hands I held to you on previous occasions, to show you they are free. The tyrant's crust is busted, so to speak. His race is run, and he himself hath scotched up the flame. Sic semper M. Ginnis, terra firma vomico Schweitzer kase, Timbuctoo erysipelas, epluribus unum.

NORTHERN WOOL.—The figures given below comprise the spring clip exclusively; that is to say, all the half year's clip of 1881 and all of the year's clip for the same year, that was exported from Red Bluff from April 1st to August 1st. It must be borne in mind that nearly all the wools grown in Shasta, Modoc, Siskiyou and Southern Oregon, and a great deal from Lassen, Plumas and Trinity, find a market in this place, and that all wool-growers north of Shasta shear but once a year, so that our spring clip is much larger proportionally than the fall clip; therefore, we class all wools that are exported from here from April to September of each year as spring clip. The total number of bags and bales shipped from Red Bluff was 3,236, making 1,042,204 pounds. The highest price paid for No. 1 wools was 27 1/2 cents, and the lowest for very inferior, heavy lots, 22 cents, there having been but a few bales of that kind, while a considerable quantity brought 25 1/2 cents, 27 1/2 cents having been paid for the greater portion of the clip; the average was about 26 1/2 cents. The number of pounds shipped, multiplied by the average price paid, gives us the handsome sum of $273,587 06 as the product of the Red Bluff wool trade in less than six months.—[Red Bluff People's Cause.
