WEST POINTERS. An item has been going the rounds of our exchanges lately, says the "Talk," purporting to be a list of the graduates from this State and Washington Territory at West Point, which is incorrect in its main points as far as Oregon is concerned, and leaves Washington Territory shorn of her cadet glory in the late war. The facts are these, as we glean them from an old pioneer, and one who knows whereof he speaks: Oregon's first cadet was Adair, of Astoria; her second, Medorum Crawford, Jr., and not Lane; the latter never graduated there. Although we believe he served some three years and 8 months, and if our memory is not at fault, young Lane was with the party of Southern cadets who hoisted the rebel flag on one of the towers of West Point, and who were met in the building by the cadets of the loyal States, driven out, the rebel flag lowered, and the stars and stripes thrown to the breeze. The next day all the Southern cadets resigned, young Lane with them. The third, Lieut. Fred, Schwatka, of Arctic fame, and the fourth, Lieut. Scott; the fifth will be young Geary, son of Rev. Dr. Geary, of Eugene City, who will graduate in June, 1882, and likely be succeeded by a son of Quincy A. Brooks, of Lake county. Washington Territory was honorably represented in the late war by her first graduate, Capt. Robert Collins, who lost a leg at Gettysburg, and is now on the retired list. We have been surprised to see the item referred to pass through so many papers of Oregon and Washington Territory, without a single attempt to correct it. It is a matter of history, and as such should be correct in a few of its leading features at least.

WORKING IN A TUNNEL.—It must be fun to be a miner in the Sutor tunnel. The rats and bats have it all their own way. The miner who brings his lunch basket is not at all sure that he will eat its contents, for if he leaves it a few moments, the rats eat lunch basket and all. Nor is his chance for dinner much better, if instead of the basket, he takes the ordinary tin kettle. A party of rats will steal a kettle before its owner's eyes and roll it away down in a hole, where no man can follow them. They then rip the lid off and devour the contents at their leisure. There are millions of these rats, and many are larger than kittens. The bats bother miners and mules. When one big bat flies against a miner's face, and another bat equally big flies in the face of that miner's mule, there is a complication of trouble. The man cannot see which way the mule is going to kick, and the mule, who cannot see either, but goes it blind, kicks at random, and is apt to hit the man where the bat hit him. The bats are as large, numerous and powerful as rats. A man to have his dinner stolen by rats, then to be hit by a bat, and kicked by a mule, is a combination of ineffectualities calculated to make him long for a call to some other field of labor, where he can do more good with greater ease and pay for himself.

There was something in the election of Davis which much amused the Senate. When Harris, in the chair, appointed Bayard, just deposed after so short an incumbency, to escort Davis to the chair, the smile that had played over the Senate broke into a moderate laugh. Davis joined in the laugh, and was escorted to the chair, in apparent good humor. When Davis returned thanks, Edmunds offered a motion, thanking Bayard for the impartiality displayed by him as President. This seemed to strike the Senate as a satire, and more laughter ensued. Edmunds saw that he had been misconstrued, and rebuked the Senators. He then said he offered the motion in all sincerity, and Mr. Bayard was entitled to thanks because he had been fair in all things, and the resolution was unanimously adopted.

Ex-President Hayes thus explains why he removed Mr. Arthur from the New York collectorship: The issue with Arthur, as collector of the port of New York, did not arise from want of confidence in his capacity or ability, but on a question of method in reforming the civil service. The issue having been made, and Mr. Arthur declining to yield the point of difference, the alternative had to be met, and his removal was ordered, but with extreme reluctance.

The story now is that Mr. Conkling's recent visit to Washington was for the purpose of insisting that the President should not select him for any Cabinet position. Ladies Calf shoes $1.50 per pair at the New York Store.

George E. Strong wanders into the mountains in Lane County Two Weeks Since, and is Still Missing. From a gentleman who arrived last evening from Southern Oregon we learn the following particulars in regard to Mr. George E. Strong, of Salem, whom we reported a day or two since as having wandered off into the mountains near Springfield, Lane county, while in a fit of mental aberration. Mr. Strong, who has until lately been an agent of the Oregon Military Road Company, is well known in this city, having at one time been assistant editor of the "Oregonian," was coming from Linkville in company with General John F. Miller and three hired men, and stopped for the night at Hill's station, on the military road about fifteen miles from Springfield, where they lodged in a barn. During the evening Mr. Strong, who was suffering from the deprivation of accustomed stimulants, from the effects of which his nerves were in a shattered condition, he not having been able to sleep for several nights, was observed to be acting strangely, and appeared to be undergoing much mental torment and anxiety, said he heard music at a distance and was going out to see what it meant. Mr. Miller sent a man to watch him. He went to Hill's house and told him that the men in the barn were trying to kill him, and that Miller would not prevent them. He was brought back to the barn and went to bed. Just before daylight he slipped quietly out, leaving his coat behind him. As soon as it was light search was made for him and he was tracked to the river, into which he had stepped, and then he turned toward the mountains. His trail was followed for some distance, until all trace of it was lost in the rocky and wild region to which it led. General Miller and party remained at Hill's for some time and searched in all directions, but no trace of the missing man could be found. Mr. Hill told him that he would collect the neighbors and make a thorough search, and General Miller reluctantly proceeded on his journey. This was on the 9th inst., and on Wednesday he received a letter from Mr. Hill stating that the country had been searched far and near, but nothing had been seen or heard of Mr. Strong. It is hardly to be expected, owing to the late inclement weather and the great length of time he has been missing, that he will ever be found alive. —"Standard."

Intelligence received at the Warner observatory, Rochester, N. Y., from Bristol, England, states that Prof. W. F. Denning discovered a bright new comet on the 4th inst. It is located in the constellation of Leo, right ascension 9 hours 22 minutes, declination north 16 degrees, daily motion 30 minutes east. This is the sixth comet which has been seen since May 1st, five being new discoveries, all but two of which were first observed by Americans, and it is certainly a high compliment to the industry and skill of American astronomers that they have shown so fine a record. The total amount which Mr. H. H. Warner has given in comet prizes during the past year is $1,300 which shows that the interest taken in astronomical affairs in this country is steadily increasing.

Dr. Hammond says that when you poke the end of your finger in your ear the roaring noise you hear is the sound of the circulation in your finger, which is a fact, as any one can demonstrate for himself by first putting his fingers in his ears and then stopping them up with other substance. Try it and think what a wonder of a machine your body is, that even the points of your fingers are such busy workshouses that they roar like a small Niagara. The roaring is probably more than the noise of the circulation of the blood. It is the voice of all the vital processes together—the tearing down and building up processes that are always going forward in every living body, from conception to death.
