A ST. LAUGHTY FLESH BEATS.

"So you wish to marry my daughter?" These words were uttered by a man who fairly hissed them through his teeth...

"Yes, sir," said Silas J. Bowen, looking up into the face of him who had spoken; "I love Myrtle with a rich, warm, tempestuous love..."

"Hark ye, my lad," said the odorless-excavating man, while a cold, skating-rink smile hovered over his face; "you say you love my daughter..."

"But surely you would not force her to marry against her will!" said Silas. "She has plighted her troth to me."

"I know not of your childish vagaries," replied the old man. "I have said my say. In three minutes I shall untie the bulldog."

That night Silas struck a man with four axes. Silas had a straight flush. He pocketed a cool thousand. Silas and Myrtle were married.
