

OREGON SENTINEL.

JACKSONVILLE:
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1882.

PRICKED ITS OWN BUBBLE.

We modestly suggested, a short time since, that a railroad running along the banks of the navigable Willamette could hardly be called a monopoly. Our esteemed anti-monopoly exchange in Portland, laughed at the idea, and assured us, positively, that the "oppressive master," Villard sat like an ogre at the locks, at Oregon city, with the power to charge just what he pleased for the privilege of passing freight through; thus making competition with his railroad or boats impossible. The next day our metropolitan friend found that the man-eater was chained, after all, and was obliged to pass any and all freight at the rate of 50 cents per ton, 10 per cent of which went to the state. Then the anti-monopolist laughed again; for he reasoned, that Mr. Villard was only obliged to pay 5 cents per ton on freight carried on his own boats and, therefore, could afford to carry freight for 45 cents, per ton, less than an opposition boat. Now, in the name of common sense, what more do the farmers want? Is that not the exact state of things the anti-monopolists say they are clamoring for? If an independent boat on the Willamette can compel Mr. Villard to carry freight for 45 cents per ton less than it can be carried by the farmers own steamboats, is it not evidence that the farmer has all the means of competition in his own hands? "Low freights" seems to be the popular demand and when we point out a sure and simple method of securing them by forcing the railroad company to compete with itself, on the river, we are offensively sneered at as a "monopolist." If the farmers, who are said to be so heavily oppressed, were to put their shoulders to the wheel, instead of throwing up their hands in supplication to the legislature, they could test Mr. Villard's ability to carry cheaper than they, and, the moment he showed it, take advantage by loading his boats to the guards. The "Standard" has pricked its own anti-monopoly bubble so that it will never hold wind again, and the best thing it can do is to put aside its soap suds and pipe and leave the bubble business for children.

MURDER WILL OUT.

It will be remembered, that; late last November the body of a man was found in the Willamette river near Weidner's mill, in Portland, with the limbs wired together and supposed to be the body of John Andros, once a miner at Yreka. There was every evidence of a violent death. The body could be obtained until two of the accessories, Dolly Adams and Molly Flippen, women of the town, could carry the awful secret no longer and divulged it to the grand jury. It appears that the body was that of J. N. Brown of Freeport, W. T., who was a witness against Carrie Bradley, the keeper of a notorious brothel in Portland, and on the 28th of last October he was inveigled into her den on Third St., lured with drugged liquor until unconscious, when the job was finished with chloroform. The body was kept for two days and then dumped into the river where it was subsequently found weighted down with stones. The "Oregonian's" details of the murder are horrible and show the chief perpetrator, Bradley, to be a perfect fiend. She and her accomplices have left the city, she having been last heard of in Victoria, but the track is fresh and it is to be hoped that every one concerned in the damnable deed will be caught and hanged. Sullivan, the man who decoyed Brown into the den, has been arrested in Yolo county, Cal. Mahone, another who assisted in disposing of the body is in jail in San Francisco and it is thought that the woman, Bradley, and her pleasant "friend" Mr. Hamilton are on the steamer Idaho bound for San Francisco. The two women who informed are in jail in Portland, for safe keeping, and it is almost certain that the whole gang will be tagged. The latest about the affair is that Bradley was arrested in San Francisco on the arrival of the steamer Idaho. An officer is on his way to that city to bring the arrested parties to Portland.

The Difference.

The sale of 617,000 acres of land, known as The Dalles Military Road grant, reminds us that the Democratic press of Oregon has been singularly silent regarding steals of land in ostensible aid of imaginary internal improvements. The line of a possible road is measured, a few pole bridges constructed; a valuable tract of land is "gobbled" by a private corporation and Democracy winks approvingly. On the other hand: if a railroad, connecting us with the world is to be built, at a cost of $40,000 per mile, Democracy sets up the howl that a company able to spend so much money must be an infernal monopoly and demands that even that which it has shall be taken away. This shows the difference between wagon roads and railroads—just about the same as that between Democracy and the party of progress.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Dalles, Or., Feb. 10, 1882.

EDITOR SENTINEL.—Even in these "piping days of peace" the political hosts are being marshalled for the fray. Already the opening notes of the approaching campaign have been sounded by the call of both of the state central committees. "Undoubtedly we shall have a lively canvass, and the full strength of both parties will be brought into the field. Oregon is now a Republican state, and the majorities of the last two general elections will be largely increased next June, for the State convention will wisely put forth good strong men as its standard bearers. The Republican party will enter the campaign with the prestige of victory in the late elections, and with such a record in the administration of the affairs of the State during the last four years as will compel the confidence and support of all tax-payers. Compared with the record of previous administrations the four years of the present state officials is a grand showing of what may be accomplished when honesty is combined with capacity. The present administration is composed, except the Governor, of Republicans, and the party will therefore be held responsible for all that has been done whether good or evil, for the people will correctly say that the Secretary of State is the financial agent of the State—responsible for all expenditures—and with the Treasurer, able to hold the Governor in check if he should wish to follow the course of the Grover regime. When the present administration entered office the State was in debt to the extent of $750,000, drawing interest at various rates. At that time the State tax was seven mills on the dollar, and the debt was increasing continually. By careful management, and prudence in all expenditures, economy in contracts coupled with a wise liberality, where it was essential, the present state officers have paid over $475,000 of the debt and there remains at the present time unpaid, only $322,000 which will probably be reduced during the present year another hundred thousand dollars. And these have been years of extraordinary expenditures. A large Insane Asylum has been built at a cost of $100,000. Over $30,000 has been spent on the State house; while the cost of maintaining the Prison, and Insane Asylum in East Portland, have increased respectively about twenty and thirty per cent. The increased cost of the Prison keeps pace with an increase of commitments. It is thought the legislative appropriation, and the management of its finances reflects credit on the officers in charge. When the first warrant on the Treasury was drawn by Secretary Earhart for the keeping of the Insane the amount due for the quarter was $16,800, and the last one was 22,000 showing that the expenses of the State have been constantly increasing. Notwithstanding the vast outlays of the period, the State tax has not been increased, but, on the contrary, reduced from seven (7) to five and one half (5½) mills and the next Legislature will probably be enabled to reduce it still further to three (3) mills, or at the outside to three and one half (3½). With such a record as this to present to the people—with such honesty, capacity, and faithfulness in its party representatives, the Republicans of the State are sure of success at the polls. The present Secretary of State, and the Treasurer, with a man like Beekman as Governor, would roll up the largest majority ever polled in Oregon, and the best men of the party want them as nominees. Beyond doubt the two former will be renominated and the latter ought to be, and will be unless Moody of The Dalles develops unexpected strength in the Willamette valley. He would make a good Governor, and poll a large vote, and next to Beekman is the strongest man for the office in the State. Time only can tell who will receive the nomination, but joined to the present Republican officers either can be triumphantly elected. Governor Thayer is the best Democratic Governor Oregon has ever had, and, while practically the other two officials have had power to keep things straight, he has worked willingly for the good of the State. When the feuds which have divided his party are settled, the Democrats will acknowledge his ability and worth; but until then he will be maligned and abused by the Grover wing of the Democracy.

SPECTATOR.

The Pardoning Power.—Speaking of the annual message of Hon. Alonzo B. Cornell, Governor of New York, the New York Tribune says that "during the year 1881 there was not one pardon granted in the Great Empire State. Quoting the words of Gov. Cornell, it says that "the pardoning power should be used as a means of promoting justice and not of defeating it."

Complete treatment for one dollar.

DAMAGING OREGON.

The persistency with which Democratic papers in Oregon are opposing a three years' extension of the N. P. land grant is most inexcusable. It can not be defended by a plea of justice, for other trans continental roads received the same subsidy, and common justice demands that all roads should be treated alike and receive equal advantage. The Oregon journals that are insisting on the taking away of the grant are doing great damage to the best interests of the State and the State is the people. They are pursuing exactly the same course that was pursued by them ten years since; that ended by breaking down the credit of the O. & C. R. R. and preventing its extension south of Roseburg and, had it not been for the lying pamphlets circulated in Germany, struck from the press of the leading Democratic paper in Portland, connection would have been made with San Francisco many years ago. Now we have a fair prospect of an independent line, severing Oregon from her commercial servitude to California and to the most exacting railroad system that ever made industry groan. The opportunity is based largely on the credit created by a land grant and, just at the moment the company shows its good faith by the most energetic construction and the expenditure of vast sums of money, those who ought to be its friends are straining every nerve to take away the grant on which its credit is mainly founded. That the crippling of the N. P. would be fatal to the best interests of Oregon and Washington territory none will deny—that it would be a triumph for the Huntington combination all admit and yet the cry "take away their grant" is kept continually ringing in the ears of our representatives at Washington with the false assurance that it is a popular demand. It is argued that the land is necessary for settlers. So it is but; it is the road alone, that gives it any value for settlement, the company is obliged to sell its lands to settlers and its most important interest is that they shall be settled as rapidly as possible. Those who are opposing this grant are doing it at the expense of the people—not in their interest—and are giving substantial aid to the powerful rival of the N. P. that is leaving nothing undone to prevent the construction of the road. It is not supposed that Oregon's Democratic editors are subsidized by the Central Pacific to assist in breaking down the N. P., but if not paid for damage to their own best interests then the more inexplicable their folly appears. Certainly, we have as much right to say that they are the paid hirelings of one monopoly as they have to assume; that those who differ with them are the willing tools of another.

In the Whole History of Medicine.

No preparation has ever performed such marvelous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as AYE'S CURE, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in throat and chest disorders, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and effects, physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Never Despair Something that never fails—Fever and Ague—To the sick it is of little consequence how they are cured, whether from a rational view of the disease or by the rules defined for the guidance of the profession, so long as the cure is certain and expeditious. To a suffering man the question on the relative merits of quinine or calomel is uninteresting. The faculty may wrangle and discuss their various theories, but Dr. Holloway's treatment dispels doubt the disciples of Esculapius have finished the first stage. Holloway's Pills are the only remedies which effect a speedy and radical cure without danger of a relapse. Read the advertisement elsewhere.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—None are genuine unless the signature of J. HAYDOCK, surrounds each box of Pills and Ointment. Boxes at 25 cents, 62 cents and $1 each.

There is considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.
