Free to Everybody! A Beautiful Book for the Asking! By applying personally at the nearest office of the SINGER MANUFACTURING CO. (or by postal card, if at a distance) any adult person will be presented with a beautifully illustrated copy of a New Book entitled

GENIUS REWARDED, OR THE Story of the Sewing Machine, containing a handsome and costly steel engraving frontispiece; also, 28 finely engraved wood cuts, and bound in an elaborate blue and gold lithographed cover. Those who expected "sickening" or distressing scenes were disappointed. Guitau walked firmly through the rotunda and court. He stumbled on one of the steps leading up to the scaffold, but recovered himself immediately. When he began to read his words were loud and clear. He gave the words now and then a sort of inflection. Captain Coleman stood upon his right, Robert Strong on his left and Woodward directly behind him. Jones took a position on the north side near the upright of the beams. Warden Crocker stood at the southeast corner of the scaffold. There was a slight delay while the spectators were pushing and jostling through the door leading from the rotunda to the corridor, at the lower end of which the gallows were placed. Guitau, meanwhile, gazed upon the crowd, looked up at the beam over his head and quickly made a survey of all the dread paraphernalia. So soon as the crowd had gained access, Warden Crocker waved to them to uncover, and all heads were bared.

THE SUPREME MOMENT. The attendants then pinioned his legs and carefully adjusted the noose about his neck. Mr. Strong placed the black cap over his head, and as he did so, Guitau called out in loud tones, "Glory! Glory! Glory!" Instantly the trap was sprung. The body fell and turned partly round, but there was not the slightest perceptible motion of the limbs. When the drop fell a yell was sent up by some persons inside the jail. This was re-echoed outside by the thousands or more people, who hurrahed lustily. For at least forty seconds after the drop fell the body hung motionless, then there was a slight motion of the shoulders and legs due to muscular contraction. Three minutes after the drop fell the body was lowered to be examined by the physicians. There was a decided action of the heart for fully fourteen minutes, and the pulse fluttered two minutes longer. When the body had hung with the feet just touching the ground for over half an hour, it was lowered into a coffin which was in readiness under the scaffold. The physicians decided that the neck had been broken. When the black cap was removed and the face exposed, the features were found to be pallid and composed. About the mouth there was considerable moisture.

THE LAST HOUR. Guitau was very restless during the most of the latter part of the night, not sleeping more than twenty minutes at a time. Toward morning he fell into sudden sleep from sheer exhaustion. He rose a few minutes after 5, and breakfasted heartily at 6:30. When the servant served his breakfast Guitau told him to bring dinner at 11 o'clock promptly. Dr. Hicks, who remained at the jail all night, was called into the prisoner's cell as soon as he rose, and he'd a consultation on religious subjects with him. At 8 o'clock Dr. Hicks saw the prisoner again, when he made a request to have a bath, and asked Hicks to go out and see the scaffold. Guitau desired him to ar-

CHARLES J. GUITAU.

Scenes at his Execution. Charles J. Guitau was hung in the jail yard in Washington on the 30th of June for the murder of President Garfield. We copy the following description of the last scenes from the telegraphic reports:

Guitau showed great nervousness and appeared greatly startled when he heard the rattle of the muskets of the guard on the stone floor of the rotunda. From that moment Guitau appeared to be thoroughly overcome with emotion. He wept freely and seemed to be in great anguish.

MORE CALM AND COMPOSED. After the death-warrant was read by the Warden the prisoner became more composed and turning away began to brush his clothing. At 12:25 a loud steam whistle was blown at the work-house, which is near the jail. The whistle usually blows at 12 o'clock and by it Guitau was in the habit of gauging the time. The delay to day was by special arrangement, so its startling summons might not come before the officers were ready. About two minutes later the iron gates at the end of the corridor were opened and Warden Crocker made his appearance. A moment later the familiar figure of Guitau was seen; his face was pallid and the muscles about the mouth moved nervously. Other than this there were no signs of faltering.

THE MARCH TO THE SCAFFOLD. The procession moved quickly to the scaffold, and Guitau ascended the somewhat steep steps with as much steadiness as could be expected from a man whose arms were tightly pinioned. At the last step he faltered for a moment, but was assisted by officers who walked upon either side. Upon reaching the platform, Guitau was placed immediately over the drop, facing to the front of the scaffold. Guitau, when he came out into the rotunda, looked calm and collected, but very pale. His arms were pinioned behind him and he held his head erect. He gazed upon the crowd without flinching. He wore a black suit, and instead of a collar had a handkerchief thrown loosely about his neck. Those who expected "sickening" or distressing scenes were disappointed. Guitau walked firmly through the rotunda and court. He stumbled on one of the steps leading up to the scaffold, but recovered himself immediately. When he began to read his words were loud and clear. He gave the words now and then a sort of inflection. Captain Coleman stood upon his right, Robert Strong on his left and Woodward directly behind him.
