A few years ago two boys of the name of John Smith were sent to the same school where the pupils had learned that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet." Hence they were more prodgial than particular in conferring new names upon each other, but the twin name of "John Smith" for a time staggered them. At last, however, they discovered that one of the young gentleman was the son of an auctioneer and the other the son of a waiter, so the former was at once dubbed Going Smith and the latter Coming Smith, names by which they are still distin-

Strange as it may seem, says the Germantown Telegraph," after all our experimenting with wood and tile draining material, we are likely to come back to wooden drains of some sort under certain circumstances. They are pronounced on good authority to be superior to, as they are far cheaper than tile drains, where the wood is subjected to the vapor of carbolic acid. But even without this preparation wooden water pipes made in the best manner, it is claimed, will last two or three generations under ground.

through the burning furnace in safety. The Sprague Herald has the following account: "The woods are ablaze for miles in that region, and on this occasion the ricks of wood lying near the track were burning and so hot that it was thought dangerous to pull through in consequence of the great heat dislocating the rails. Supt. Griffin with his usual promptness first ran the gauntlet of fire, and reported it safe to proceed with the train. Ladd pulled it through at a seventy mile rate of speed without damage." O. W. Pond, the advance agent of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, was a passenger on the train, and never before having visited the far west, was somewhat surprised at the execution of such a daring maneuver. In conversation with an Oregonian reporter last Monday, hesaid it almost made his hair stand on end. "We shut down the windows and closed the door tight just before we started," he continued, "but the air inside the car was like the breath from a furnace and the whole train seemed to be on fire. The flames licked the window glass savagely, and although it lasted a few moments it is an experience I shall never forget and never again wish to undergo. I can't help but think of the terrible danger we passed through. If one rail of the track beneath us, having been warped
