

BILL NEE'S HORNETS.

Last fall I desired to add to my rare collection a hornet's nest. I had an embalmed tarantula and her porcelain nest, and I desired to add to these the gray and airy home of the hornet. I procured one of the large size after cold weather and hung it in my cabinet by a string. I forgot about it until this spring. When warm weather came something reminded me of it. I think it was a hornet. He jogged my memory in some way and called my attention to it. Memory is not located where I thought it was. It seemed as though whenever he touched me he awakened a memory—a warm memory with a red place all around it. Then some more hornets came and began to rake up old personalities. I remember that one of them lit on my upper lip. He thought it was a rosebud. When he went away it looked like gladiolus bulb. I wrapped a wet sheet around it to take out the warmth and reduce the swelling so that I could go through the folding doors and tell my wife about it.

Hornets lit all over me and walked around on my person. I did not dare to scrape them off because they are so sensitive. You have to be very guarded in your conduct toward a hornet.

I remember once while I was watching the busy little hornet gathering honey and June bugs from the bosom of a rose, years ago, I stirred him up with a club, more as a practical joke than anything, and he came and lit on my sunny hair—that was when I wore my own hair—and he walked around through my gleaming tresses quite awhile, making tracks as large as a watermelon all over my head. If he hadn't run out of tracks my head would have looked like a load of summer squashes. I remember I had to thump my head against the smoke house in order to smash him, and I had to comb him out with a fine comb and wear a waste-paper basket two weeks for a hat.

Much has been said of the hornet, but he has an odd, quaint way after all that is forever new.

Boys and Girls.

"If I had a dozen children I should want them all boys," said Mrs. Turf. Boys can take care of themselves, they are energetic, enjoyable, and it doesn't take half as much sewing to keep a family of boys along."

"Now, if I should have my choice," said Mrs. Workhard, "I should rather have my children all girls. Girls are so gentle, so hopeful, and have so much more refinement than boys; and then it is such a pleasure to sew for them, they look so pretty in the garments made for them."

"Very well, ladies, said Mrs. Sensible, "you are both right and wrong. I believe in a mixed family—part boys, part girls. The boys influence the girls to self-reliance, the girls refine the boys by their gentleness. A boy who is brought up with his sisters makes the most manly man, and the girl who is brought up with brothers makes the most womanly woman."—"New Haven Register."

Husbands, don't think when you have won a wife that you have also a slave. Don't think that your wife has less feeling than when she was your sweetheart. Her relationship to you is simply changed, not her nature. Don't think that you can dispense with all the little civilities of life towards her on marrying. She appreciates those things quite as much as other women.

Don't be gruff and rude at home. Had you been that sort of a fellow before marriage, the probabilities are that you would be sewing on your buttons still. Don't make your wife feel that she is an incubation on you by giving grudgingly. What she needs, give cheerfully as if it were pleasure to do so. She will feel better, and so will you. Don't meddle in the affairs of the house under her charge. You have no right to be poking your nose into the kitchen, than she has to walk into your place of business and give directions to your employees.

What men love is the comforts of the married state, not the person who provides them—wisely duties rather than the wife. A man enjoys his home. He likes the cherry fireside, the dressing-gown and slippers, the bright tea-urn, and the eyes behind it. He likes to see boys and girls growing up around him, bearing his name and inheriting his qualities. He likes to save his clothes laid ready to his hand, stockings in their integrity, but tons firm in their places, meals pleasant, prompt, yet frugal. He likes a friend such as money cannot hire—attentive, affectionate, spontaneous, devoted and trustworthy. He likes very much the greatest comforts for the smallest outlay; and certainly he is to be loved. His love runs in the rent of his likings, and he is speedily indistinguishable from them.
