A telegram from Mount Washington to the New York "World" says: The sensation of the week is the successful attempt of Mr. H. D. Corey of the Massachusetts Bicycle Club, to ride down the mount. The winding rongle oftentimes running on the brink of precipices hundreds of feet high, to go over which meant instant death, were In the building situated on the corner of ridden over by the intrepid bicyclist, whose steady nerves neve forsook him, and he successfully accomplished the feat without a mishap. It seems that he had considered the feasibility of the feat for some time, and on Monday morning he decided to make the attempt. He left the Gien house at 7:30 and walked up the mountain so as to become familiar with the road. He reached the half-way house at 8:40 o'clock and partook of some light refreshment and registered his name. And he reached the Summit house at 10 o'clock, after a journey of two hours and thirty minutes.

Just as the clock struck 11 o'clock Mr. Corey mounted his machine, which was of the "X traordinary challenge" pattern, and began to ride down the mountain. The air was extremely cold and his hands were numbed from holding on his handle bars. The first two miles were ridden easily, but as the road was very steep the machine gained speed and momentum at every revolution of the wheels. He kept the brakes on, however, and as the curves were not very short, ordinary care enabled him to navigate in safety.

Just as the two-mile post was passed the up-stage was met, the driver of which took the inside of the road and allowed the wheelman a track not more than three feet wide, but careful riding brought him through safely. Then the road began to get steeper and steeper, and the wheels went faster and faster, until a three minute gait was reached, and new application of brakes became necessary. The continued pressure on the brake handle soon began to tell on Mr. Corey's arm's and just as he passed a steep incline on to a more moderate one, and while still going at a very rapid rate, he met a carriage and was compelled to make a quick dismount to save a collision.

All the way down he met parties of tourists, who gave him such a kindly advice as "Get off," "Posh" "Look out for the corners," or "You'll break your blooming neck." He made no reply to the taunts, but kept steadily on toward his destination. The fifth mile was the steepest he had yet encountered, and the machine began to "jomp" and fairly flew down the incline. The Commercial College, Preparatory and Inmile includes what is known as "going strumental music "round Cape Horn," a nasty sharp curve, on one side of which the mountain towers way above you, and on the ther is a yawning abuss which mean

into it. The danger of the situation vas enhanced by the brake beginning smoke from the friction, and it was ith difficulty that he controlled the heel. From that point to the Glen of the General Land Office, Peter Jardine and all other persons etaining an interest in the land taken by him as a homestead described as the W ½ of N W ¼ Sec. 27 and pasted down the hill at a pace probfront of the Glen House at 12:15 havforty five minutes.
