CARRIED OVER NIAGARA.

Self possession of a man doomed to sure death.

The following thrilling story is related in a letter dated October 3, 1848:

About sundown last evening, a man was carried over the falls. Who he was is not known. His dress and appearance indicated respectability, and after he got into the rapids his self-possession was extraordinary. His boat was a very good one, decked over on the bow, and, I should think, would carry three or four tons. No other than a person unacquainted with the current above the rapids would venture so near them. I was on the head of Goat Island when I first discovered the boat, then near half mile below the foot of Navy Island, and nearly two miles above the falls.

There seemed to be two in the boat. It was directed toward the American shore—the wind blowing from the shore and the sail was still standing. Being well acquainted with the river, I regarded the position of the boat as extraordinary and hazardous, and watched it with intense anxiety. Soon I discovered the motion of an oar, and from the changing directions of the boat concluded it had but one. While constantly approaching nearer and nearer the rapids, I could discover it was gaining the American shore, and by the time it had got near the first fall in the rapids, about half a mile above Goat Island, it was directly above the island.

There it was turned up the river, and for some time the wind kept it nearly stationary. The only hope seemed to be to come directly to Goat Island, and whether I should run a mile to give an alarm or remain to assist in case the boat attempted to make the island, was a question of painful doubt. But soon the boat was again turned toward the American shore. Then it was certain that it must go down the American rapids. I ran for the bridge, rallied a man at the toligate, and we ran to the main bridge in time to see the boat just before it got to the first large falls in the rapids. Then I saw but one man—he was standing at the stern with his oar, changing the course of the boat down the current, and as it plunged over he sat down.

I was astonished to see the boat rise, with the mast and sail standing, and the man again erect, directing the boat toward the shore. As he came to the next and each succeeding fall he sat down, and then would rise and apply his oar in the intermediate current. Still there was hope that he would come near enough to the pier to jump, but in a moment it was gone. Another, that he might jump upon the rock near the bridge; but the current dashed him from under the bridge, breaking the mast. Again he rose on the opposite side. Taking his oar, and pointing his boat toward the main shore, he cried: "Had I better jump from the boat?" We could not answer, for either seemed certain destruction. Within a few rods of the falls the boat struck a rock, turning it over and lodged. He appeared to crawl from under it, and swam with the oar in his hand, till he went over the precipice. Without the power to render assistance—for half an hour watching a strong man struggling with every nerve for life, yet doomed with almost the certainty of destiny to an immediate and awful death, still hoping with every effort for his deliverance—caused an intensity of excitement I pray God never again to experience.

Candid Advice.

"I can swim the whirlpool at Niagara," said a stranger in a confidential whisper to a hardware man on Woodward avenue yesterday.

"Can you?"

"I feel that I can. I should desire some advice from you. Would you try it if you were me?"

"No, sir—no, sir, I wouldn't think of such a thing. A man who hasn't been in a bath tub for a year, nor had on a clean shirt for a month, wouldn't stand a ghost of a show with a whirlpool. You'd better go and tackle a drink of water and gradually work up to it."—"Detroit Free Press."

A MODEL HOUSEWIFE.

A correspondent of the Chicago "Times" writes: A word about this French Canadian housewife, though she deserves chapters. I have drifted of late into some of the most desolate and poverty-stricken collections of huts which the mind could conceive—which, indeed, it is next to impossible for an American to conceive at all—hamlets where the men, with gaunt, burnt faces, long matted hair, forms twisted in middle age as with us at eighty, by reason of privation, exposure and unsettled hopelessness, and the clothes altogether indescribable in their meanness, appear to the vision like specters from some raft of a "Medusa." But even here I saw no woman, young or old, who was not neat in her personal appearances, painfully clean in the care of her home, and apparently in the habit of doing three-fourths of all the work that was done. The amount of labor that this poor but contented creature performs is nothing less than marvelous. Promising that before the age of 35 she is usually the mother of from six to twelve children—most French Canadian girls are married before they are 18—let us consider her work for a moment. She has, first of all, the care of her children, which is not a slight thing, even though they are the most careful and self reliant of all the world's urchins; then she does all her cooking, making her bread out in the sun in a stone oven built near the house; she does all the washing and mending of clothes; she does all of her own sewing and knitting, and, in some parts, spinning; she keeps all the money of the household, and makes all the purchases; she scrubs the front steps and all the floors of the living rooms in h r house every day, and she whitewashes the outside of her house once a fortnight or two, if they have a cow she milks and cares for it; and then (we have dealt thus far only with the incidental occupations by which spare moments are filled up) she works all day in the field with the spade, hoe or rake. If she is near salt water, she also salts down barrels of tomcods and flounders for the family's winter use. If she lives near a town she also goes in with the horse and charette to the market, and knits while she is not selling produce, on two days of the week. The race does not anywhere afford a more superb spectacle of industry than this woman presents. And with all she manages to keep, if not a fresh, at least a bright and Cherry look upon her face; she dresses herself for church well and tastefully, and carries her good clothes as if she was accustomed to nothing else; and her children, particularly the girls, are models of cleanliness and good order. This, bear in mind, is as true of the poorest and most isolated hamlets as it is of the well-to-do suburban villages.

Re-appearance of the Great Comet of 1882.

It appears quite possible, says "Nature," that as the moon draws away from the morning sky toward the end of the present month, this comet may be again observed with our larger instruments. Its distance from the earth has been increasing from soon after perihelion passage in September last, and a maximum takes place at the beginning of this month, when the distance is 5,988; the earth then for a time overtakes the comet; the distance diminishes to 5,709 on December 1st. The intensity of light, however, is greatest at the end of August, and the comet then rises at sufficient interval before the sun to render observation feasible. It will at least be of much interest to ascertain if the comet can be reached with our most powerful telescopes. The only comet which has been hitherto observed under similar conditions is the celebrated one of 1811, which, it may be remembered, was observed by Wisniewsky at Neu-Tscherkash, in August, 1812.

A tramp applied for food at a house in the suburbs recently, and was asked where he came from and where he was going. "Well, mum," he replied, "I came from Providence this morning, and am rapidly going to Heaven by the air line."

The deepest sea-sounding ever made was in the Pacific Ocean in 1874 near the entrance to Behring's Sea. The depth was 4655 fathoms, and the cast was made from the United States ship Tuscarora. The shallowest water in the middle of the Atlantic, 731 fathoms, showed the existence of submarine mountains 10,556 feet high.
