

UNDER THE SEA.
WONDERS IN STORE FOR VISITORS TO NICE.

The International Exhibition at Nice is reserving some wonders for the foreigners who may propose to pass a portion of 1883-4 upon the borders of the Mediterranean. One of the wonders is a balloon, which its inventor, M. Toselli, calls the "observatory under the sea." It is made of steel and bronze, to enable it to resist the pressure which the water produces at a depth of 120 meters. This "observatory under the sea" has a height of eight meters, and is divided into three compartments. The upper compartment is reserved for the commander to enable him to direct and watch the workings of the observatory and to give the explanation, necessary as to the depth of the descent and what they will see in the depths of the sea. The second apartment, in the center of the machine, is comfortably furnished for passengers to the number of eight, who are placed so that they can see a very long distance from the machine.

They have under their feet a glass, which enables them to examine at their ease the bottom of the sea, with its fishes, its plants and its rocks. The obscurity, being almost complete at several meters of depth, the observatory will be provided with a powerful electric sun, which sheds light to a great distance in lighting these depths.
The passengers have at their disposal a telephone, which allows them to converse with their friends who have stopped on the steamer which transports the voyagers to such places as are known as the most curious in the neighborhood. They have also a handy telegraph machine. Beneath the passengers is an apartment reserved for the machine, which is constructed on natural principles, that is to say, as the vessel of a fish, becoming heavier or lighter at command, so as to enable the machine to sink or rise at the wish of the operator.

A Father Hubbard.

The other day when old Major Sol-man announced his readiness to proceed in the direction of the church, his wife appeared wearing a Mother Hubbard dress. The old man intently regarded her for a few moments, and asked:

"Mary, what sort of a coat do you call that?"

"Air you a goin, to wear it to church."

"Why, certainly, Jeems. The Mother Hubbard is all the fashion now."

"Wal I'm glad to know it," the old man replied: "Just wait until I get ready and we'll go."

The old man went out in the kitchen, took a couple of meal sacks, cut the bottoms out, sewed the tops together, and put them on in imitation of pantaloons. When he returned his wife uttered a loud cry of astonishment, and exclaimed:

"Great goodness, Jeems, what's that?"

"Father Hubbard," the old man replied.

"You're not a goin' to wear them sacks are you?"

"I've got to be fashionable to keep up with you. I've got as good a right to wear these meal bags as you have to go in that bran sack."

"I'll take it off."

"All right; off goes Father Hubbard," and turning away he added to himself: "Only one way to beat a woman, and that is by agreein' with her. Ef it hadn't been for the dadd Hubbard I'd been in a mighty bad fix."

A Snake with Feet.

Mr. Richard Decker, a resident of Walkitt valley, in Ulster county, while working in his oatfield recently, was surprised by a blacksnake which came at him with open mouth, his head elevated from the ground 12 or 14 inches. He succeeded in killing it with his pitchfork, and in measurement found it to be 5 feet 7 inches in length, with a diameter of an inch and a half at the largest part. The extraordinary feature of the creature, however, was the presence of two well formed legs with feet attached to the body at a point about 15 inches from its tail.
The legs were of a light pink or flesh color without bone, and so elastic that when drawn to their full length and suddenly released they would spring back to their normal position at the reptile's side. The feet were about the size of a hazel nut and were hooflike in appearance, and of a darker color than the limbs to which they were attached. Upon each one of these feet or hoofs were 63 small claws, white and of a horny substance.
The body of the snake, with the legs attached, was seen by most of the inhabitants of the village before it was put into alcohol and forwarded to the National Museum at Washington.
