

Not long ago I heard an elderly woman make this speech to a young girl: "When you live to be my age, you will know how little love or romance, or whatever you call it, is worth." On such temperaments such words fall like frost. Experience is not always a guarantee of wisdom—the older some people become the less they seem to know. A child seeking protection in its mother's arms is a better teacher than a person with a hard, morose nature. What do the blind know about the beauties and wonders of earth? What folly for them to affirm that the flower fringed path, the radiant clouds, the starlit sky alight, exist but in our imagination. The patriot is not led to battle through a base or sordid motive. If he did not love his country, his wife, his children, would he be ready to lay down his life to defend his home? Disinterested affection exists, and it is that, and that alone, that will give an atmosphere of home to the log cabin, or the palace, and woe to the person who attempts to find one without it.

Mr. Merrill is right—that our newspapers have been none too dear at four cents—or certainly not at three; and that, while it is unfortunate for a large business interest and a growingly important profession to have newspaper publishing made even more expensive, it returns than it has always been, it is a vague and questionable advantage to the public to bring the extensively made journals down into the cheap field. "Cheap and nasty" is not desirable. What ever is at the lowest price must be either in quantity or quality. And, after all, is too much for a family of average means in these days to use five cents a day in the purchase of a newspaper? Is not the sum as well received for that object as the amount spent for other unnecessary objects.

It is said that a first class insect destroyer has been discovered in France by Dr. Nessler. He recommends a mixture of soft soap, consisting of four parts; extract of tobacco, six parts; aryl alcohol, five parts; methylic alcohol, twenty parts, and water, 100 parts. German gardeners are said to have a great liking for this destroyer of insects. This is the rationale of the mixture. The extract of tobacco is dissolved in soft soap, and water is added to make up for what is evaporated. When the soft soap is dissolved the other ingredients are put in. Good stirring is required before use.

A Montana belle being asked by a Bismarck man if she possessed any culture out her way replied: "Call that you bet you've vegetated so like we did. We kin sling more culture to the square foot in Helena than they kin in any camp in America. Cultured Oh, hush my corsets till I smile."—Bismarck Tribune.

A little boy and girl out in the west end of town were discussing the stars. The little boy said they were worlds like ours and have people in them. The little girl, with all the disdain she could muster, said: "They are not; they are angels'—cause I see 'em wink."—Des Moines Leader.
