Mr. Koehler informs the "Tidings" that the southern terminus of the operating division of the railroad will be moved from Grants Pass to Phoenix as soon as the track can be laid and ballasted that far. Track laying is progressing slowly now—at the rate of from 500 yards to 1000 yards a day, on the days when the men can work at all. A little season of good weather would soon put the track into Phoenix, and Mr. Koehler thinks it will be but a short time after that before the graveling will be done so that the trains run regularly. Just how soon Phoenix will be the terminus, however, depends, of course, greatly upon the weather.

WAR IN JACKSON COUNTY.

As we stated last week the end is not yet in the Kelly-Ruble suit for the Coyote Creek mines. The order of the Court giving Kelly possession of the claim was placed in the hands of J. G. Birdsey, acting as elisor, but when serving the papers on Ruble himself and posse were attacked by a party of eighteen or twenty armed men intrenched in ditches who told Birdsey to "git" which they did in double quick time as the attacking party emphasized the order with several shots at Birdsey and his men. Finding his force too small Birdsey returned to town when a warrant was sworn out against seventeen of the men recognized on the Ruble side, charging them with an assault with intent to kill. A militia force of fifty four men was then raised in town and on the road to the mines, all armed and equipped, Deputy Sheriff Steadman taking the warrants for the arrest of the men and Elisor Birdsey with his force following after to see that they were taken and that the orders of the court should be obeyed in turning the mines over to Kelly. Before their arrival, however, the Ruble men considered over what they had done when thirteen arrests were made and the mines turned over to the owner without bloodshed. The "militia" and their prisoners arrived here yesterday and their preliminary examination will commence before Justice Huffer to day. The following are the names of the parties arrested.

Wm. Ruble, Clint McIntosh, Columbus Bennett, Mr. Dizerd, Joseph Dizerd, Mr. Hall, Lou Wallace, Jeff Wallace, Andrew Trustee, Mr. Russell, Mr. Pollock, J. D. Post, Kale Corder, John W. Robinson and Chas. Bear.

Wm. Ruble was not at the mines when the arrests were made but came to town yesterday and surrendered to the authorities.

The following list of names will show who went to the war: J. G. Birdsey, T. B. Kent, E. D. Foudray, S. Booth, Henry Kubli, N. Hall, George Love, Chas. Keeton, Wm. Linville, John X. Miller, I. W. Berry, Wm. Bigham, John Dyer, C. R. Wilkinson, Jacob Slagle, Abe Mensor, Henry Mensor, N. Mitchell, D. Cook, Sebastian Schumpff, Dave McBride, F. Steadman, A. S. Jacobs, F. Settle E. Smith, Ed Booth, Chas. Griffith, Jack Lowry, Ca Curry, F. Gilbert, P. Kelly, Tip Justus, Cal Yocum, Al. Baldwin.

About Druggists.

All druggists should be honorable gentlemen, and we are inclined to believe the majority of them are; but there are what is allied "black sheep" in all professions. We came across one of the latter not long since. While in his store a customer asked for Ammen's Cough Syrup. As the druggist was doing it up for him he said: "I have a preparation which I can recommend as better than this." The man said, "I will take that then, but my friends have spoken so highly of Ammen's Cough Syrup I thought I would try it." Now, the writer having used Ammen's Cough Syrup, and knowing its virtues, also knowing the manufacturer, and that he put it on the market for the benefit of mankind, as well as for the sake of gain, had some curiosity to learn why the druggist preferred to sell some other remedy to it. So we asked him why it was. Imagine his reply! He said "Why, I make just eight cents more on the bottle I sold him than I would have made on Ammen's." I said "Oh, thats it." "Yes, he says, "I always recommend and try to sell what pays me the largest profit." Comment is unnecessary. Let us hope that they are but few like him in the drug business Meeting the customer a few days later, and desiring to know if that kind of business paid, we mentioned the circumstance to him, and asked if the bottle of medicine the druggist recommended did him any good. He said, 'No, I used about one third of it, and threw it away; I then went to another drug store and bought a bottle of Ammen's Cough Syrup, which cured my cold." We asked, "Why did you go to another druggist?" He replied, "Because I shall never spend another cent with that man."
