TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

STOLE A FLOWER.

An old woman, with long gray hair, stepped forward when he name was called, and confronted the police judge.

"You are a very old woman to be in a place of this kind," said the judge. "What is the charge against her?" turning to an officer.

"Stealing a pot of flowers, your honor."

"Who made the complaint?"

"I did," replied a man, stepping forward. "I know that it looks hard to have such an old woman arrested, but I am a law-abiding citizen, judge, and I don't intend to be imposed on. This is the way the whole thing came about: I keep a large flower depot. Day before yesterday this wamon came into the store, and when I asked her if she wanted anything, she shook her head Just then a customer came in and I paid no attention to her, but after she was gone I discovered that a pot, containing a fine geranium, was missing. I knew she took it, and what she wanted with it is more than I can tell.

If she had stolen something to eat or wear it would have been a different thing.

The old woman looked up and said. "Judge I stole the flower."

"Didn't you know it was wrong."

"Yes."

"Was the temptation so great that you could not withstand it?"

"There was no temptation. It required more of a struggle to take it than it would have required not to have taken it."

"That is a very singular occurrence, madam. Tell us all about it. Don't think that you are among those who desire to see you punished, and rest assured that I will stand by you. Law or no law, it makes no difference. There is a court in the human heart, old woman, whose decrees go farther and are nearer to justice than the written declaration."

The old woman again looked up. Tears were in her eyes, but with a corner of the old black shawl, drawn around her shoulders, she wiped them away.

"Oh, sir," she said, "to make you understand why I took the flower might be a story too long to tell in a court, and it might be out of place to tell it anywhere to strangers, but as you have spoken so kindly I will tell you. Years ago, I lived in this city. My parents were well situated and I was carefully reared. I married a man whom everyone recognized as an elegant gentleman but to me he proved to be a drunken brute. At last he took our little boy and went away, I know not where, leaving me with a baby just two months old. My parents had died and I went our into the country and changed my name. I worked for a living, heart-broken as I was. One day my little darling was taken ill. I took her in my arms started towards town, where she might have the proper medical attention but she seemed to grow worse. At last I knew she was dying and I sat down under a tree. I held her to my bosom a long time, for she shivered, and when I looked again, she was dead. A man who lived near by made a coffin, and I buried the little girl under the tree where she had died. Then I went away, I know not how, and began a long search for my husband, not that I wanted him, but that I wanted my son. I must have gone crazy, for I was seized one day and taken to a mad house. How long I remained there I don't know but I could see that I was much older looking than when I went in. From time to time I implored the keeper to let me out, but he refused. About a month ago I saw an opportunity and escaped. I was not mad, for when again under the clear sky, the memory of my troubles were as fresh as though but a day had passed. I turned, after much inquiry, toward my native place, and a few days ago I arrived here, but I did not stop until I had found my way to the little grave under the tree. I had carried stone and built a little wall around it, but briars and bushes had grown up so thickly that I could hardly find the place. I cleared the briars away and came to town. While passing along the street I saw this man's flowers. I stole a geranium pot, and it now sits on the little child's grave."

The flower dealer had sunk upon a bench. "Great God, judge!" he exclaimed, springing up. "The woman is my mother."

Coral Fisheries.

Some interesting information about the coral fisheries of Italy is given in a report of F. G. Haughwout, United States Consul at Naples. More than five hundred Italian ships are engaged in the fisheries, either upon the Italian banks or upon those of foreign nations, giving employment to about 4200 salors. The quantity of coral collected annually by the ships sailing under the Italian flag amounts to 56,000 kilograms, valued at 4,200,000 lire (about $8,000,000). In Algeria, 10,000 kilograms of coral are taken anually, representing a value of 750,000 lire. In addition, the Spanish ships, about 60 in number, gather along the coast of Spain and elsewhere about 12,000 kilograms of coral, in value about 800,000 lire.

From these figures it may be seen that the quantity of coral gathered annually by ships not bearing the Italian flag amounts to 22,000 kilograms, of the value of 1,55 ,000 lire. This, added to the figures already given as the direct result of Italian fisheries, amounts to 78,000 kilograms valued at 5,750,000 lire (about $1,150,000). These are the figures which represent approximately the annual gathering of coral in different seas by the Italian and foreign ships and its value.

There are in Italy 60 coral workshops, giving work to about 6000 men, women and children, by whom the coral is brought to that condition which renders it so interesting and precious. The men employed earn from 20 to 80 cents a day, and the women and children from 16 to 40.

A Cherry Tree.

There seems to be no limit to the growth of the cherry tree in this State, for no sooner has the largest been found than some one comes to the front with a still larger one. The man who tells the first story [illegible] on this Pacific slope anyhow. B. Sunderland's cherry tree, measuring 76 inches in circumference, is thrown in the shade by one found by "Vindicator" on the farm of Jasper M. Mitchell, Powell's valley, which was planted by his father in 1858. It is the "oxheart" variety and bears a full crop every year. A careful measurment about 3 inches above the ground gives its circumference at 103 inches, or 2 feet 10 inches in diameter. About 4 feet up the trunk the first limb puts forth, which is 63 inches in circumference. Two feet higher another limb puts out that equals in size any ordinary cherry tree. The tree stands 45 feet in height and its branches cast a shadow over nearly 100 feet square. It stands just at the corner of the door-yard and the ground around it has never been cultivated; in fact the tree has been used for a hitching post since the time it became large enough to stand it. It is somewhat cut and scarred, but rough usage does not seem to hurt it, and the chances for many more good crops from it are very promising. It is certainly the champion cherry tree of Oregon so far as heard from.

Bishop Wurtzburg, a noted clergyman, used to delight in telling a joke at his own expense. He was walking in a meadow, when he met a little shepherd lad, "What are you doing, my son?" said the bishop. "Tending swine, your reverence." "How much do you get?" "One florin a week." "I am also a shepherd," continued the bishop, "but I have a much better salary." "That may be, your reverence, but then, I suppose you have more pigs under your care," replied the boy.

According to instructions from the Postmaster General, persons having 3 and 6 cent stamps and stamped envelopes can get them exchanged for other stamps, postals or stamped envelopes but stamps previous to 1861 will not be taken; also addressed envelopes will be taken, but no mutilated or defaced stamps; envelopes defaced by directing will be taken in exchange at postage value.

In North Carolina a white man was arraigned for stealing chickens from a negro. The jury was composed of seven white men and five negroes, and one of the latter was made foreman. They came into court and the clerk demanded: "Have you agreed upon a verdict?" "Yes, sah." What is it?" "De jury am gone Democratic, sah, and the prisoner am not guilty."
