Fremont and the Modocs.

In the spring of 1846 Lieutenant John C. Fremont entered California on his third exploring expedition to the West and his second trip across the continent.

Late into the night those young officers, on whose shoulders such weighty responsibility had been thrown, sat by the smouldering embers and counseled about their future course.

Slumber's chains bound the camp, but around it stole the sinuous forms of savage enemies. Nearer and nearer they crept, until they stood among the sleeping men by the fire.

Loss of Life at Sea.

The General Superintendent of the United States Life Saving Service has furnished the following list of wrecks and casualties to American vessels on or near the coasts and on the rivers of the United States and at sea and in foreign waters during the last nine years.

Average yearly wrecks, 233. Average loss of lives, 775. The years 1879-80 records the least number of lives (573) lost, while 1874-75 records the largest (943).

A clothing dealer down on Jefferson avenue was dancing around the door of his store in a great rage yesterday when an acquaintance halted and asked him the cause of his excitement.

A Tillamook lad was recently the victim of misplaced confidence. A large whale had drifted ashore in the neighborhood in which he lived, and his father desiring to possess such a coveted prize, fastened a rope so the narrative relates, around the behemoth's tail, and it was at this moment of triumph that the over confident youngster seated himself upon the forehead of the monster.

The owner of a judgment against a deceased hotel keeper in New York, which had been standing for thirteen years brought suit to enjoin the widow from drawing the insurance money on her husband's life, which was on deposit in a bank.

This is a baby. It is a girl baby. How sloppy its chin is. How red its eyes. What horrid contortions it makes with its face.
