

A Heroine.

A WOMAN WHO WAS WORTH MANY SOLDIERS.

I saw by the Philadelphia papers the other day that the Grand Army posts had given a reception to Mrs. R. M. Bernal, and happening to walk down the street with General Sheridan, I asked him if he knew her. "Do I know her?" he replied, with a surprised look on his face, "I should say I did. That woman was worth a whole brigade of soldiers and several batteries of artillery down in the Winchester campaign, and she was one of the genuine heroines of the war."

"Tell me about her."

"Well, you see, I always believed in fighting on information. People said I was reckless and daring, and all that, and when I happened to win a fight they said it was Sheridan's luck. But I tell you there wasn't luck about it. I never went it blind. I always knew what I was going to hit before I made a strike, and generally tried to strike at the right time."

"And down there in '64" continued the General, "when I lay before Winchester, I wanted information of what was going on in the enemy's lines, and I wanted it awful bad. I must have it, don't you see; but how I was going to get it, I didn't know. Crook was pretty well acquainted in all that country, and one day I asked him if he didn't know some one in Winchester we could depend on. He said there was a little Quaker girl in the town that he thought was all right, and I concluded to try her."

"There was an old darky who had a garden patch about 15 miles from my headquarters, and he had a pass to go into Winchester three or four times a week with vegetables for the Confederate officers and town people. I had him brought into my headquarters one night and asked him if he knew the schoolma'am. He said he did, and then I asked him if he could get a note to her without giving her away. He said he could, and then I wrote her a letter on tissue paper, appealing to her loyalty and requesting her to give some information of what was going on in the rebel camp."

"I wrapped the note up in tin foil in a little wad, don't you know, and made the old darky carry it in his mouth. The next day he went into town with a load of vegetables and gave it to her."

"What was her name?"

"Rebecca Wright was her name then, but she is married now and her husband's name is Bernal."

"Did you get an answer?"

"Yes, the darky brought me back a reply, in which she gave me some very important information and provided to send me more from time to time. We kept up a correspondence after that and I knew everything old Early was doing. After a few weeks she sent me word that Kershaw's division of 8000 or 10,000 men had been detached and was going to join Lee's army. As soon as I learned that he was gone and was far enough off to prevent his getting back I made an attack and captured Winchester."

"Did you find the girl when you got into town?"

"Indeed I did, and my report of that battle was written in her school-room!"

"Was she ever rewarded?"

"Well, I got her a place in the Treasury Department and it was there she got acquainted with her husband; but, it, I think she is entitled to a pension!"

The New Steamer Alaskan.

San Francisco, March 30.—The new steamer Alaskan arrived from the east yesterday and attracted considerable attention at Broadway wharf. She is said to be a more powerful and faster boat than her consort, the Olympian, but is not fitted up so nicely. She will probably be docked and cleaned before proceeding to Puget sound. The Alaskan is 280 feet long, 75 feet in width, over her guards, and has two masts. Her wheels are 36 feet in diameter, and her shaft is 20 inches in thickness. Her engines are low pressure, and her four boilers of improved steel. Three hundred life preservers and 600 feet of hose serves as a protection for the traveling public, and for comfort there are 100 berths. The vessel is furnished with mahogany tables, finely upholstered benches, mirrors, racks, bridal chambers, the electric light, steam register for heating purposes, cell bells, etc. She is provided with four life boats and as many life rafts. The upper saloon is finished in white, and is 240 feet in length, 30 feet wide and 12 feet high, with a dome and ceiling. Off this are 70 state rooms and four bridal chambers.

There are now about 1800 men, including Chinamen, at work on the Oregon Pacific railroad and work is being pushed.
