

OREGON SENTINEL

JACKSONVILLE: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1884.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President, James G. Blaine, of Maine. For Vice President, John A. Logan, of Illinois.

Nominees for Presidential Electors, D. P. THOMPSON, of Multnomah, WARREN TRUITT, of Polk, J. C. LEASURE, of Umatilla.

The Voice Of Ohio.

The "Sun" in a double-leaded editorial says: Well, Ohio performs for Cleveland in 1884 the same office which North Carolina performed for Greeley in 1872. It kills him as a candidate. The Democracy will not have Cleveland for President. They would not have Greeley, not alone because he did not represent the ideas of the Democracy, but still more because he was not fit to be President.

The leading papers of Vermont have indorsed a recommendation made by Governor Barstow in his retiring message, that the salaries of Judges be increased, that they be allowed traveling expenses, and that then they be prohibited from accepting railroad stock.

St. John probably fancies that he is posing in a dramatic style when he refuses to withdraw. After the election it will be seen how sorry a figure he cuts in a great Presidential election.

The commissioner of the general land office renews his recommendation that the pre-emption laws be repealed, and that the homestead laws be amended so as to require proof of actual residence and improvement for two years, before homestead entry may be commuted to cash payment.

Blaine said a good thing at Indianapolis when he said: "I may be permitted to express the opinion that no more unpatriotic thing can be done than for Southern men to urge continued solidification based on memories of the rebellion." That remark expresses a striking fact. The south is solid for the Democratic party because it was solid for the rebellion.

Every Republican should bear in mind the effect as well as the origin of the Morey letter of 1880, and give no attention to any new or especially striking slander may be gotten up by the Democratic party in its desperation just on the eve of election too late to be met or answered.

The Big Show.

Hon. W. D. Fenton, Democratic Presidential Elector held forth at Holt's Hall on Friday the 17th. His appointment had been liberally billed and in consequence he was greeted by a large audience of Democrats and Republicans, and a goodly number of ladies. The Republicans come out to hear his argument (1) in reply to Senator Dolph and the ladies to learn how silently and completely he ignored the suffrage question. The Cleveland and Hendricks club met at the Town Hall and after the audience had been in waiting for some time marched in, in double file, headed by the speaker, while the band played a stirring air. Immediately behind the speakers stand in campmeeting style at a mourners bench full of the battle-scarred veterans of Democracy who have been devouring each other in local contests for the past 20 years, but on this auspicious and happy occasion with the cheering outlook for national plunder, the lion and the lamb laid down together, which betokened the dawn of the political millennium but it was painfully apparent that the long continued siege of lying had almost obliterated the lamb. Conspicuous in the forefront of the group were some of the doubting Thomases who have to be whooped up, and made prominent to keep them in line. After the club had been seated Judge Prim arose and addressed the audience as Fellow Citizens, and after a few seconds reflection added Ladies and Gentlemen, and then proceeded to say that were in the midst of a great Presidential contest, and the question to be decided was, whether we would elect Cleveland and Hendricks or Blaine and Logan—here he came to a full stop, evidently not knowing who was running for Vice President on the Republican ticket; a dozen school boys chattered out the name in stage whispers but the non-plussed speaker who appeared like a lawyer pleading the cause of a bad client, did not catch it, until a voice from the mourners bench gasped out—Logan—and he proceeded to conclude by introducing Mr. Fenton who arose and bowed to the audience; his appearance excited storms of applause, which was construed as a relief at the conclusion of the labored effort of the introductory orator. Mr. Fenton was faultlessly attired and wore his hair in a Lisbon wave on the right, and carried back on the left, in the Grecian style of architecture. He prefaced his remarks by a brief history of his acquaintance with the distinguished gentlemen who had introduced him, and then said he would not attempt to argue the great political questions of the day and rambled off in a glittering string of generalities without dates or figures representing the Democratic party as the friend of the laboring man, and after a moment's reflection, he threw aloft his lily white hands, displaying his snowy cuffs and glittering sleeve buttons, and said he was one of the workmen of America in highly tragic style. He gave a long and pathetic account of the appearance of Mrs. Parnell at the Academy of Music in New York, and told how she appealed to Irish Americans to vote for Cleveland and Hendricks, the friends of the down trodden and oppressed. But he failed to tell how the Democratic party ignore the women of their own land, unless it is some way to further their own selfish plans, as in the instance of Mrs. Parnell, they are always ready to accept the aid and listen to the songs of Miriam while the guileless and unselfish Moses meekly appropriates all the honor. He failed absolutely to refer to the action of the Democratic party on the Mormon question, which Senator Dolph said was the great moral question of the day and notwithstanding he disappointed his Republican hearers on this point he displayed good judgment in not attempting to handle any moral question, with the unsavory character of their candidate staring him in the face. He concluded by a cringing appeal to Irish Americans for their votes. During his long talk an old Democrat vet. who had evidently partaken too freely of the Democratic luxury, and a lot of boys kept up quite a confusion back in the Amen corner but they helped to wind up the show in good style when an enthusiastic Democrat called for the burralls at the close. Mr. Fenton made a tragic and desultory appeal to the voters, which embodied the only Democratic argument, the desire for a change, and the impression on the audience was, that Mr. Fenton had mistaken his calling as an orator, but would have been a dazling success on the Epic Stage and the big show ended everybody satisfied they had got the worth of their money.

A Query.

EDITOR SENTINEL.—As quite a number of people are daily arriving in our State, and an impression is abroad among some, that a man must be in the State a certain length of time before he can vote for President, I think it would be well to make the matter plain in the columns of your paper, so that no one will stay away from the polls through mistake.

The Vote on the Tariff bill in the House of Representatives, last May, stood as follows:

Table with 2 columns: FOR THE BILL, AGAINST THE BILL. Republicans 118, Democrats 152, Total 270.

Carl Schurz did good work for the Republican party in Ohio. Wherever he spoke the gains were very marked. Sensible people recognize a political "Hessian" and always act in opposition to his recommendation.

Thos. A. Hendricks voted against the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments; against the admission of Colorado and Nebraska, and in 1864 endorsed the Democratic platform declaring that the war was a failure.

Cleveland Writes A Letter.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in the course of a political speech in Brooklyn on the night of Oct. 23d, read the following letter addressed to his wife from Grover Cleveland, the Democratic nominee for President. For silliness it can't be beat and we hope all will read it through:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1884. (Private.) My dear Mrs. Beecher: Your letter, as you may well suppose, has affected me deeply. What shall I say to one who writes so like my mother? I say like my mother, but do not altogether mean that, for she died in the belief that her son was true and noble as she then he was trifling and kind. I am shocked and dumbfounded by the clipping that you send me, because it purports to give what a man actually knows, and not mere reports, as the other four or five lies do which I have heard about my life. In Albany I have never yet met any living woman who has any reason to suspect me of whom I care. What shall I say to one who writes so like my mother? I say like my mother, but do not altogether mean that, for she died in the belief that her son was true and noble as she then he was trifling and kind. I am shocked and dumbfounded by the clipping that you send me, because it purports to give what a man actually knows, and not mere reports, as the other four or five lies do which I have heard about my life. In Albany I have never yet met any living woman who has any reason to suspect me of whom I care.

I am at a loss to know how it is that such terrible wicked and utterly baseless lies can be invented. The creatures who coin and pass these things appear to think that the affair which I have not denied makes me defenseless against any and all slanders. As to my outward life in Buffalo, the manifestation of confidence and attachment which was then tendered must be proof that I have not led a disgraceful life in that city. As to my life in Albany, all statements that tend to show that it has been other than laborious and correct are utterly and in every shadow untrue. I do not wonder that your good husband is perplexed. I honestly think that I deserve his good opinion, and any aid he is disposed to render me. I do not want him to think any better of me than I deserve, nor to be deceived. Cannot I arrange to see him, and tell him what I cannot write? I shall be in New York on Wednesday or Thursday afternoon, and the evening I shall spend in Brooklyn. Having written this much, it occurs to me that such a long letter to you is unnecessary and unexpected. It is longer than any I have ever written on the subject referred to, and I beg you to forgive me if your kind and touching letter has led me into any impropriety. Yours very sincerely, GROVER CLEVELAND.
