A curious feature of the trip was an old wagon, known in was detrained to get it through to demonstrate the feasibility of emigration. The Hudson Bay Company discouraged every roll of its old wheels, and threw every obstacle in the way. It was dismembered, dragged by pieces, ingloriously dwindled to the dimensions of a cart, but, through the indomitable will of its owner, it kept rolling toward the Pacific. Prior to 1842, the United States and England were in joint occupation of the Oregon region. It was generally understood that the country would be English or American, according to the tide of emigration. One day in October, 1842, Dr. Whitman was called on a professional errand to Fort Walla Walla, twenty five miles from his home-It was a trading post of the Hudson Bay Company, and was quite jubliant just at this time over the annual line of goods. Tables were spread for the feast, at which the doctor found him self a solitary American.
