At precisely 11:30 o'clock, a sudden being barred at present from giving whisper: names, although there is not good reason why it should not be done However, the gentleman who made closure consists in proving beyond the neans the existence of the human soul, laying bare the greatest secrets of nature, and proving the doctrine of the glass, eternal faith, "that the soul of man doth live," the disclosures and proofs of which will shortly startle and astonish the entire world. For the sake of convenience the gentleman alluded to will be called Mr. Holland, a man of small statue, mild eye and thoughtful countenance, a devout Christian, possessing a peculiar belief that the soul of man is a counterpart of the body itself; and in this theory of the dual man he sought the key of life and death. He reasoned that within this body of bone and sinew was yet another body existing in vapory form, which death alone can free, and that by a simple microscopic device the dull sight of a human eye might penetrate the minutest particles of the air we breathe, and see the soul take form and flight to the boun daries of another world. His atten tion was first attracted to this, he says, by a man lying upon a sofa suffering with a pain in his foot, and yet there was no foot there to suffer the leg having been amputated nearly to the hip, "For years," says Mr. Holland, "this incident ran through my mind, until at last I resolved upon an experiment. I procured the most awerful leaves I sayled F-3, and some oleted an invention of my own, and clay that lay so still. when I had my light arranged perfect ly, so I could examine the microbes of the air, I called upon a friend who had with his imaginary finger. He did so, and to his wonder and astonishment I spelled out the sentences he wrote. That was conclusive evidence to me," continued Mr. Holland, "and you know the rest." The second experiment was one of the greatest difficulty-that of watching the soul itself take flight. The friends of dying men would not allow experiments, and, indeed, it would have been a delicate matter to have asked it. Hospitals afforded opportunities, but physicians and attend ants had no faith in the experiments of the quiet gentleman, whom they no doubt alluded to as a "crank," so for nearly a year he was waiting for some man who was ready to die. The opportunity came at last; a con sumptive wanderer from the East sought relief in the Western air. He fell peniless, and about to be taken by the authorities to the county poorhouse, when Mr. Holland interposed and had him removed to his own home to nurse and watch him die. Through many long hours of the night Mr. Holland sat by the bedside of his charge fanning the spark of life lest it should go out in the night, when all efforts at the experiment would be lost, and leaving orders by day with his wife to call him the moment the pa tient seemed to be sinking.

The fatal moment came alout 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Stretched upon a low bed stead, with the death rattle sounding in his throat, lay the young man of perhaps 23 years of age. Nature's own true Laxative. Pleas during his post-bellum raids is now apparatus. The back part was then ville.
