

Carving.

BILL NVE RELATES WHY HE HANDED HIS CHILDREN FROM THE TABLE.

"Children and fools tell the truth," I have heard, and certainly children have a faculty of working the truth in at the wrong time. Truth is a good thing—in its place. But the great harm comes from using it at an opportune time. I am the only and original father of one of the class of children who are loquacious and truthful in a way that makes the parent heart bleed sometimes. If this little incident did not happen to make me its victim, I would scorn to tell it, for people ought not to make themselves or their children too conspicuously in print.

Guests were invited to dinner, and while in my baronial hall the welkin rang and the cold baked bean was passed around amid joyous laughter, and witty remarks rang out on the warm air, while the gorgeous flagons and glittering cut glass and silver of a neighbor shone resplendent beneath the mellow light of the chandelier and candelabra, the humble virtue of these lines, as the host, would ever and anon make a brilliant remark which would be received with a wild and tumultuous applause.

If a guest sought to evade his duty as an applauder, or to come in on time with his or her welcome plaudit, that guest was marked by the eagle eye of the carver, and he was given the neck of the turkey and the wing of the duck as a mark of respect.

Habitual guests at my house have learned this, and when I ladle out the gravy and a "Jew de spirit," as A. Ward called it, they know that they can take their choice between heisterous laughter and starvation. In this way the meal passes off with much "eolat." For each slash of the carving knife there is a suitable joke, and those who have been in the habit of eating at my table are aware that there is a proper moment for mirth, just as there is for napkins, sugar bowls or coffee.

I do this partly because I want to draw attention from my carving. My carving is like my dancing. It is not conventional. It is simply original, bold and audacious. I try to introduce joints where nature did not intend to have them, and I seek to make a short cut across a fowl in a way that is productive only of chagrin, vexation and fragments of hen. Man is a weak, fallible creature, and he ought not to seek to monkey with the anatomy of a fowl or to improvise joints and apertures where they do not belong; for at such time as you think not the knife will slip, and it will tip over the celery glass and fill the bosom of a warm personal friend with gravy.

To attract attention and keep up the spirits of the company, therefore, I make it a kind of business, as it were, to fill the air with baronous amusement at the same time that I shed stuffing through the atmosphere and mutilate the bosom of a hen. This gives me an opportunity, occasionally, to gather up the sage, bread crumbs and gizzards out of my lap, and return them to the platter without exciting remark.

A few weeks ago, on an occasion of this kind, a cousin of mine—a young lawyer connected with the Omaha road, and young man of good parts, and whose business it is to stand between the Omaha road and substantial justice, at so much a year and traveling expenses—was present.

I had just said something smart to keep the company good natured while I asked a young lady at the other end of the table to please return the duck which I had inadvertently presented to her with the carving fork stuck in it. Every one was laughing joyously and trying to conceal it by putting their napkins in their mouths, when my cousin turned to my little daughter and said:

"Bessie, haven't you got a funny papa, though?"

"Yes, indeed," said the ungrateful, unfaithful and irreverent heir apparent to a great name; "you better believe he's funny—when we have company."

And yet people wonder why I am not the same genial host I used to be, and why the children do not eat at the first table, and why there is a sound of kicking against the door of an adjoining room, and the occasional wail of a hungry child as the meal progresses.

Eli Perkins once told me that he was teaching his little girl to tell the truth. I asked him who he employed to attend to the irksome task, and whether he was not rash to take up a branch of the science for which there was getting to be so little use.

It is said that truth is mighty and will prevail. It is certainly mighty in the mouth of a child. Still, we may always expect more or less of it from children—until they get to moving in good society and learn better.

It is stated at the Land Office that under the present practice in that office, when public lands within a township are open to entry, through the filing of plats of survey, there is a rush of speculators and land grabbers, who often succeed in securing the best lands, to the great injury of bona-fide settlers. Moreover, this class of persons are able frequently to learn when the plats of survey are to be received in advance of the settlers, who are thereby placed at a disadvantage. To correct this abuse as far as possible, the Commissioner of Land Office has issued the following instructions to local land officers:

"Hereafter, when an approved plan of survey of any township is transmitted to you by the Surveyor-General, you will not regard such plat as officially received at and filed in your office until the following regulations have been complied with: First—You will forthwith post a notice in a conspicuous place in your office specifying the township that has been surveyed, and stating that the plat or survey will be filed in your office on a day to be fixed by you and named in the notice, which shall not be less than thirty days from the date of such notice, and that on and after such date of such notice, and that on and after such day you will be prepared to receive applications for the entry of lands in such township. Second—You will also send a copy of such notice to the Postmasters of the Postoffices nearest the land, and a copy to the clerk of each court of record in your district, with the request that the same be conspicuously posted in their respective offices. Third—You will furnish the public press in your district with copies of such notice as a matter of news. You will give such further publicity to the matter in answer to inquiries (for which you will charge no fee) and otherwise as you may be able to do without incurring advertising expenses."

The Chinese of New York have sent resolutions of thanks to President Cleveland for the proclamation in their behalf in Washington Territory. This little formality of thanks was not tendered to the Lollygonian, because the Chinese Six Companies knew their coin had previously done the talking.
