The People Kept Out of the Land.

Report of railroad constructionaccording to the statements of the commissioner of the general land office -show that 17,532 miles of railroad have been constructed under the land grant system. The commissioner crit icizes with severity the policy that has been pursued of withdrawing from public appropriation lands within the essumed limits of certain reads, and retaining such lands in indefinite reservation. In Oregon and Washington the evil effects of such policy have been very keenly felt by the people. The greatest off-nder in this regard has been the Northern Pacific rati-

The commissioner declares that he knows of no law authorizing or recognizing the lecation generally of railreads by divisions or sections. The entire line, including its branches, he says, should be located before the law (as found by the supreme court) vests in a railroad company any rights to any land. To support this he cite. the Cedar Rapids cases, as reported in 110 U. S., page 27. So he argues that the date of filing in the general land office the complete map of the whole line is the date when, under the law as determined! by the Supreme court, settlement rights within railroad limits cease, and the rights of the coupanies. It is clear that if this view of the law is rigidly enforced, settlers in many places may hold lands as egainst railroad companies that claim them.

The commissioner justly remarks that an official withdrawal of lands from appropriation and disposal under the public land laws before the time arrived when the right of appropri ation and disposal was concluded by the lawful identification of granted lands was clearly an act of wrong to the government and of injustice to the settlers, while of great and improper advantage to railroad corporation: The difference in time, as the commissioner says, between the accepted and actual definite locations of the lines of road bave varied from some months to several years, and sometimes to many years, iduring all of which time settlement, rights have been refused, entries canceled or applications rejected, and lawful claimants ousted from their lawful posses. sions. This is not an overdrawn state ment. It has been the basis of a land complaint on the part of many of our people during a long series of years. In numberless instances the corporations have intimidated the settlers and driven them from lands to which they were justly and lawfully entitled, and it is largely to these acts of injustice to individuals that the slow progress of the northwest in settlement and indus trial development has been due. The commissioner says that the number of settlers having indisputable legal right to the lands occupied by those who have been forced to buy their homes of the railroad companies; or suffer eviction because of official declarations of superior railroad right, founded upon constructive withdraw als made before any railroad right had actually been acquired, can never be ascertained, but his statement of the fact will meet the ave of thousands who have been victims of this oppressive saystem, which ought never to have been permitted to exist .-"Oregonian."
