Fort Klamath. We understand that the Secretary of War has lately issued orders to abandon several of the Government posts, among which is Fort Klamath, Oregon, and we think he has either shown poor judgment, or else been ill advised by other parties in regard to Fort Klamath. Since this order has been issued we have been in constant receipt of loud remonstrances from the settlers of that part of the country entirely unprotected from the numerous predatory hands of those who are only kept in subjection by the presence of an armed force sufficient to overawe any attempt at lawlessness. In our estimation, any parties suggesting the abandonment of Fort Klamath either are endeavoring to make political capital or are in an attempt to make a cheap reputation for economy, that would prove very much the contrary, as the massacre of Gen. Cauty is still fresh in the memory of Oregon; and to again leave the settlers unprotected by militia, would be like leaving a babe in the hands of some savage animal. The fort is located in a thinly settled portion of the State, about 4000 feet above the sea level on an open plain. The ground during the whole year is covered with frost, and it is impossible to utilize this land for farming purposes. The only use which can be made of it is for grazing. The natural resources are almost entirely undeveloped, and the Indian agency is six miles distant, where large bodies of Indians live, whose pursuits are of the most peaceable nature, owing to the simple and convincing fact that any uprising would be promptly quelled by the military authorities quartered in close proximity; and there is no reasonable doubt that the spirit of peace now so prevalent among the citizens, as well as the Indians, would be seriously disturbed by abandoning the post. There is no denying that the natural antipathy existing between white and Indians, generally taken in connection with the fact that the nearest fort would be distant several days' journey, would encourage the Indians to depredation, or to summarily resent real or fancied injuries. This, of course, would cause bloodshed, and possibly a prolonged and expensive war, destructive alike to the present and future prosperity of the country. While the country is sparsely settled, still it will rapidly advance, provided the settlers can be made to feel that the government will protect them. Under such circumstances the development will be such that in time the fort can be abandoned and the country still governed.

A thief in Fort Valley, Nc., hired a little negro to go down the chimney of a certain store and open the back door promising him fifty cents and half what he could carry away. The boy went down several feet and then stuck fast and he could go neither way. He yelled for a long time before he was heard, and seemed very glad to go from the chimney to the lockup.

A Snake Story.

The almost incredible story recently printed about the death of a boy near Grand Falls, Maine, from hemorrhage caused by pulling from his mouth a live snake which had grown to his flesh proves to be literally true. The lad's name was George Murichson, and his age is 8 years. He was a bright little fellow, and lived with his parents on a farm about four miles from the town. Early last winter the boy began to act strangely sick. He had a most voracious appetite, and it was impossible for him to get enough to eat. His friends got alarmed about it and sent for physicians, who began dosing him for worms. As the winter wore on the boy grew worse and worse. One day he felt something crawling up from his stomach into his throat. He almost choked to death, for the crawling creature tried ineffectually to come out by the nasal passage. In a short time the snake (for such it was) forced his way up the boy's throat and stuck its head out of his mouth. The lad's sister, who was near by, saw the head of the serpent just as it drew back into the boy's mouth. Very soon the snake stuck his head out a second time, and his little sister made a grab at it and pulled from the boy's mouth a live snake fourteen inches long. It had a piece of flesh attached to its tail nearly as large as a hen's egg. The boy lived a short time only after the snake was taken from him, dying of violent hemorrhage. It is supposed that the boy had gone to sleep in some field and that the snake had crawled down his throat. The reptile has been preserved in alcohol.

Governor Swineford of Alaska, who has gone to Washington makes an interesting report of the management of affairs in that territory. There is a law prohibiting the importation of whiskey into the territory, yet very inferior whiskey is carried there and sold at prices ranging from $8 to $12 per gallon, thus affording an enormous profit to the liquor dealer. Governor Swineford had occupied the government house but a little while when the outgoing marshal presented him with a bill for the furniture in the house, amounting to over $200. After paying the bill the governor learned that the furniture belonged to the government, but it was too late to recover his money, as the ex-marshal had absconded. It has also been ascertained that the former officials have been in the habit of riding on the steamships on passes and then collecting money from the government as if they had paid their expenses. These people thought that the governor was unnecessarily squeamish and particular when he declined to follow the practice of his thrifty predecessors.

We say to readers that we believe that the intention and duty of all kinds of popular government is to promote the interests and protect the rights of the masses of the people. For us to accomplish this it is our duty look out for the interests of our own people before those of Canada or Europe or Asia, and that to do so properly will set the American labor high above that of foreign nations.

But besides this, inasmuch productive industry is the hub of the national wheel, it must not only be protected but diversified, and its domestic hindrances removed that the labor employed in the manufacture of its varied interests shall have a just share in the benefits to be derived, so that labor shall stand on the same plane as capital so far as government protection reaches and that labor then must enter upon its own broad field of effort which offers reward to every industry, temperance and education; so that he who will may build and engrave golden letters on the bastions of time.

Obituary of Mrs Tillie F. MacCrimmon.

MacCrimmon--Tillie F. Kluppel, wife of John C. MacCrimmon, departed this life at her home in North Yakima, W. T., June 8, 1886, after an illness of two weeks, aged twenty-nine years, two months and one day. She was born at the German M. E. parsonage in Springfield, Ills., April 7, 1857, and in the eleventh year gave her heart to Christ and openly united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which she remained a member until the end of her earthly pilgrimage. Less than one year ago she gave her hand in marriage to her now bereaved husband, and they both left this city with bright hopes for a long prosperous and useful career at their new home. Alas, how futile are all human anticipations! Her illness had its origin in premature confinement, her child surviving but four hours. Ten or more years of her riper maidenhood she was very useful as a Sunday School worker, and the members of her classes in Jacksonville and in our German mission school in Portland, will never forget the precepts of her example and teaching. In disposition she was gentle, kind and unassuming. Prominent in her religious character was a strict conscientiousness, combined with a quiet, hopeful cheerfulness. To her venerable parents, her beloved husband, her three brothers and one sister, with many other friends, her memory is precious, and they may well cherish the rich legacy of an upright, christian life she has left to them. Appropriate funeral services were held at North Yakima, conducted by Rev. Mr. Fish, of the Columbia River conference. "She is not dead, but sleepeth." F. BOSS, Her former pastor. Portland, Or., June 16.

We regret to chronicle, as we do this week, the death of Mrs. Tillie F. MacCrimmon, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Adam Kluppel of this city. She was one of the excellent of the earth, worthy to live but ready to die, and from her place and promise of usefulness on earth has gone to her higher place above. The sympathies of many friends are with the bereaved.--Ed. of Pacific Christian "Advocate."

The railroad construction superintendents are troubled a good deal with the white hands they have been employing lately, most of them working only a day or two after being passed up over the road from below, otherwise the work would go on faster. The company are therefore compelled to depend mainly on their Chinese hands, and are bringing up all the Chinamen that can be engaged anywhere on the coast, to put the road through speedily.

The grading has been completed for a long distance above the end of present terminus at Gibson's and if the bridges are built as speedily above Southern's as below, it will not be long before trains can run up to Bailey's Soda Springs.

The railroad men expect to have the road completed to Sim Southern's, (Hazel Creek) by the 1st of July, to which point passengers and express matter will be delivered and received, thereby reducing the distance between railroads to 110 miles. This will leave only about 9 or 10 miles more road building to reach Bailey's, which point it is claimed, will be reached by August 1st. After leaving Bailey's, the work will be in Siskiyou, as Bailey's is close to the county line.

WANTS TO FIND HER NIECE--Mrs. Clara Thompson is very anxious to find her niece whose present name she does not know, but whose maiden name was Clara Heger. Will papers throughout this state and Washington territory please give publicity to this paragraph? Information may be sent to the "Oregonian."

Why Eve Didn't Need A Girl.

A lady writer in one of our exchanges furnishes some reasons why Eve did not keep a girl. She says: "There has been a great deal said about the fault of women, and why they need so much waiting on. Some one, a man of course, has the presumption to ask, 'Why, when Eve was manufactured out of a spare rib, a servant was not manufactured to wait on her?' She didn't need any servant. A bright writer has said: 'Adam never came whining to Eve with a ragged stocking to be darned, buttons to be sewed on, and gloves to be mended right away--quick now.' He never held the newspapers until the sun went down behind the palm trees, and he, stretching himself, yawned out, 'Is supper ready, dear?' He made the fire and hung the kettle over it himself, we'll venture pulled the radishes, peeled the potatoes, and did everything else he ought to do. He milked the cows and fed the chickens looked after the pigs himself, and never brought home half a dozen friends to dinner when Eve hadn't any fresh pomogranates. He never stayed out till one o'clock at night and then scolded because E. E. sitting up and crying in the gate. He never loafed around corner groceries while Eve was rocking little Cain's cradle at home. He never called Eve up from the cellar to put away his slippers; not he. When he took them off he put them under the fig tree beside his Sunday boots. In short, he did not think she was especially created for the purpose of waiting upon him, and he wasn't under the impression that it disgraced a man to lighten his wife's cares a little. That is the reason Eve did not need a hired girl, and with it is the reason that her descendants did."

A Mystery.

Every one remembers well, who has passed that way, the old New York House, which stands a short distance below the foot of Scott mountain, in Trinity Valley. It is situated in one of the most lonely and unfrequented spots to be found in this region, formerly it served as a stopping place for travelers and trappers, but of late years it has been deserted altogether save by an occasional trapper or hunter that took refuge in there for a single night. Last week it took fire and burned down; curiosity prompted some of the passers by to look at the ruins, when to their amazement the outlines of a grave were discovered beneath where once stood the house. A crowd of persons was soon collected, and the grave opened, when the skeleton of a human being was discovered that must have lain there the last twenty years or more. And now the question is who is the mysterious dead that has been buried beneath the old New York house? What murder and robbery took place there so long ago that all the traces of the missing one is lost? Already we hear the first of the numerous stories that will spring up concerning this mystery. It is said that about twenty years ago a man left Indian Creek mining camp with a large sum of money and was last about half way down Scott mountain, since which time he has never been heard from. It will be strange indeed if after all these silent years this matter would be traced up and brought to light. One thing is certain, viz, a murder has taken place at this spot, and the victims bones were buried beneath this old wayside stopping place.--"Scott Valley News."

WASHINGTON, June 14.--The President to-day appointed William J. Bryan to be postmaster at San Francisco. The appointment is generally considered a good one at San Francisco. He was formerly city recorder, which position he discharged well. He now owns a drug store. Mr. B. was appointed postmaster on the joint recommendation of Jose D. Carr, and others. John R. Irish and P. B. Tully were first choice but so much fractional opposition was manifested that they finally united on Bryan as second choice.
