The official term of the governor is four years. Governor Moody's term, therefore, will expire on the second Monday in next September. But the returns of the vote for governor are required to be sent, souled to the secrerary of state, who delivers them unopened to the speaker of the house of representatives. The speaker then opens the returns and the vote is can vassed by the house. As the legislature ') the law of 1882, does not meet until January, 1887, Governorelect Pennoyer cannot be qualified when the term of his predecessor expires. The question arises, can the legislature, by changing the time of canvassing the vote, extend the term of the governor beyond the constitutional limit? If not, who will be governor after September 13:if Or will we have any governor? The law provides that the governor shall continue in office until his successor is qualified. But the law did not contemplate, cer tainly, that any legislature could by enactment prevent such qualification so as to extend the gubernational term. If the legislature can extend such term three mouths, as in this case, by postpoong the canvass, why cannot it extend it three or four or any number of year-? The term is fixed by the constitution. Can the legislature alter it?
