He goes so far as to declare that money is paid to the Custom-house officers to have their papers declared all right. A majority of the new arrivals represent themselves as tea, silk or rice merchants. Nine out of ten are laundry-men. Money to start laundries is advanced them by the grocery firms, and a high rate of interest is charged, not unfrequently a hundred per cent being extorted. Inducements are held out to Chinamen that if they will come they can have their own laundry within one year. This has had the effect of increasing the arrivals and at the lowest estimate, 1,000 Chihamen have been smuggled into new York since the passage of the Restricton Act, who belonged to the prohibiton class.
